By International News Service

Rome, Jan. 31.—While the Italian high command tonight claimed that German squadrons successfully bombed the Suez Canal, and at the same time admitted the fall of Derna, the first hint that Italy might have to abandon her colonial empire was sounded.

This warning of possibly imminent abandonment of Libya, Italian Somaliland, Ethiopia and other parts of East Africa had some of the earmarks of a trial balloon.

It was sounded by the Gazetta Del Popolo of Turin, one of Italy's important papers.

Gazetta Del Popolo made the point that such abandonment would be only temporary. It stated:

"Italy's attitude will not change even if the fortunes of war may impose temporary abandonment of all colonies."

British Mop Up

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 31.—Advanced British striking forces, bombers and motorized troops, operating west of the fallen Italian base of Derna toward Bengasi today, methodically cleared the way for the expected general assault upon that important naval center and capital of eastern Libya.

It appeared that the same program that reduced Bardia and Tobruk, and Wednesday Derna, was at work again—dashes of reconnaissance and attrition by Britain's dusty tanks and an endless offensive patrol of the air by British bombers.

Airdrome Bombed

The Royal Air Force told of a heavy bombardment of the Italian air base at Barce, 120 miles beyond Derna on the road to Bengasi, announcing that its day-long activities of yesterday had been "mainly focussed" on that military settlement.

The airdrome was declared to have been repeatedly attacked, and direct hits were claimed on a series of hangars and other buildings. One Italian plane was reported downed.

The British command itself covered its activities on every front—from Libya to the fighting along the frontier areas of Italian Somaliland 2,000 miles to the south—in ten words:

"On all fronts operations continue to develop to our advantage."

From Kenya itself it was reported that Nigerian troops operating in the coastal sector had joined the British in harrying the Italians in Italian Somaliland, destroying the village of Kiamboni and meeting not a single Fascist soldier.

The town, said to have been a center of Italian native troop activity, was reported burned by the

In Line of Duty

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 31.—German raiders, flying singly but in impressive total numbers, inflicted numerous casualties in London today, including Maj. Robert Williams, United States air observer, who was seriously injured. Three hospitals and a number of other buildings were hit.

Maj. Williams, the second United States Army observer to become a casualty in the present war, was taken to a hospital, and fears were expressed that he might lose the sight of one eye. He was injured by a fragment from a 100-pound bomb.

A Native of Texas

A native of Albany, Tex., the 39-year-old major was the first American military casualty in this war since Capt. Robert M. Losey, Assistant United States Military Attache at Stockholm, was killed in a German bombing raid at Domoes, Norway, April 21, 1940.

German guns along the coast of France have been lobbing shells 10 or 11 miles inland over the Kent coast in the last three days, but the random shots have been falling mostly in open country.

One, however, knocked down a church steeple near Canterbury.

"The shells fall intermittently," said one observer. "Nobody is paying any attention to them."

(Most of the previous shelling has been confined to the Dover Straits, harbors and the coastline. Dover is 23 miles from France, hence the shells now have been fired at least 34 miles.)

The Luftwaffe, using clouds to hide its movements, strewed high explosive and fire bombs over many London areas, apparently without aiming at specific targets. Other such raids were made on the east Midlands, southern and southwest England.

Cheers for Roosevelt

At times today bursts of machine-gun fire were heard from low-flying planes apparently trying to shoot down London's barrage balloons.

Of the three London hospitals damaged, one received a direct hit. The government acknowledged damage to other buildings and a small number of fires, but said the number of dead and wounded was "not large."

Other bombs fell in a London square—further identification was not permitted—and in surrounding streets, wrecking two shops and heavily damaging several others.

While the third straight day of persistent daylight attacks was in progress, Prime Minister Churchill

2-Billion Asked

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

House Republicans last night lined up behind a $2,000,000,000 straight grant of credit to Britain as the Administration's unlimited loan-lease authorization received a Rules Committee "go" signal.

The credit grant was proposed in lieu of "unlimited, unprecedented and unpredictable powers" for the President in a minority report signed by eight House Foreign Affairs Committee Republicans.

The report later was carried before a general conference of House Republicans, but no effort was made to bind the House minority.

No Curbs on Voting

Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., said the conference was "purely informational." Every House Republican was left free to vote as he chooses, but a majority of those present urged amendments restricting the President's powers.

Streamlined with Administration amendments the "all-out" aid measure earlier was given right of way in the House on Monday by the unanimous vote of the House Rules Committee.

The Rules Committee heard a brief statement on the bill by Chairman Sol Bloom, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, then approved a rule permitting three days of general debate on the measure, with no limit on amendments to be offered thereafter.

Speaker Rayburn set Friday as the goal for a final vote, as leaders repeated that the measure will pass by a large majority without further substantial changes.

Declaring for "all aid to Britain short of war, and short of sacrificing our own defense and our own freedom," the minority report asserted this can be accomplished "without granting enormous power to the President."

Two Republicans Abstain

Two committee Republicans failed to sign the report. They were Representative Foster Stearns, of New Hampshire, who is generally sympathetic with Administration foreign policies, and Representative Tinkham, of Massachusetts, who is opposed to any aid bill.

Two committee Republicans who had voted to report the Administration bill nonetheless signed the opposition statement. They were Representatives Eaton, of New Jersey, and Rogers, of Massachusetts.

No Democrat signed it, although Representative Shanley (Democrat), of Connecticut, voted against the 'Grave Danger'

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The Western Hemisphere "is now in grave danger of foreign invasion," Secretary of the Navy Knox declared to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday.

The fourth Cabinet officer to appear before the committee this week on behalf of the bill for lending arms to Britain, Secretary Knox said that "a victorious Germany would move over to this hemisphere just as soon as she could accumulate the strength to do so."

That time, he said, will come "very soon—unless we now take the steps to check her career of reckless aggression."

Painting a somber picture of the British situation, the Secretary said he expected "a very grave crisis in from 60 to 90 days" in the Anglo-German war.

Watching the Weather

"Right now," he said, "the Germans are watching long-range weather indications for a period when they may have uninterrupted good weather."

Information received by the Navy Department has led to fears that the Nazis "are contemplating the use of gas in a big way," the Secretary added.

After making a courtesy call on Chairman George of the Foreign Relations Committee yesterday, Viscount Halifax, British ambassador, said he thought Hitler would soon "have a go" at an invasion of the British Isles.

"It is hard to see how Hitler can stand still," he said, adding that he had "no information" on exactly when the onslaught could be expected.

Secretary Knox told the committee that success of German bombing raids on industrial areas, plus submarine warfare, plus Hitler's refusal to be distracted by events in the Mediterranean have combined to create the opinion that the mass assault on Britain will take place within three months.

Although indiscriminate night bombing failed to break British morale, the raids on specified industrial areas "have been far more effective and have given cause for alarm to us who have been watching closely," Secretary Knox testified.

Submarines Worst Threat

The "most serious phase" of German attack is "the comp[ete] success of the submarine cam[paign]," he declared.

Secretary Knox revealed that according to Navy Department [fig]ures British and American factories together turned out more planes than the Germans in December.

"It's not that the Germans have the capacity," he pointed out, "but they have been desperately seeking a new type of ship that would make all the British [fleet] obsolete in the air."

Secretary Knox reiterated

Invasion Waits Superbomber, Experts Say

By Harold B. Hinton

The lull in the German attack on the British Isles is due to a frantic search for an irresistible air weapon to complete the otherwise perfected arrangement for an invasion, Secretary of the Navy Knox told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday during his testimony in favor of the lease-lend bill. He added that this information came to the Navy Department from reliable sources inside Germany.

The Secretary did not specify what sort of air weapon his informants have in mind, but there are Government technicians here who understand the weapon has been found and is in production.

According to these sources, the new bid for air supremacy to cover the landing operations of ground forces will take the form of a pressure-cabin bomber able to operate with impunity at 40,000 feet, safely beyond the range of Spitfires and Hurricanes as designed at present.

Noncooperating Plants Face Seizure, Roosevelt Warns

Phelps-Dodge Strikers Demand Bargaining Election

By the Associated Press

C. I. O. workers at the Bayway, N. J., plant of the Phelps-Dodge Copper Corporation walked out yesterday as work was resumed at two other establishments important to defense.

A wage agreement ended a strike at the Martinolich Boat Co. Shipyards at San Diego, Calif., which is working on five boats for the Navy. A. F. L. building trades workers went back on their jobs on a $1,550,000 expansion program at Wright Field, Ohio, Army Air Corps testing center.

A fresh dispute involving 1,500 truck drivers cropped up, however, at Dayton, Ohio. Federal conciliators were working to prevent a threatened strike which would halt deliveries of materials to Wright Field and Dayton industrial plants.

Union Chief Quits Negotiations

At Milwaukee, President R. J. Thomas of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers Union announced his withdrawal from negotiations seeking to settle a ten-day-old strike that has halted production of $40,000,000 in national defense orders at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. Thomas said "no headway was made" at a conference in which he and other union representatives

Ford Offers to Build Defense Materials At Cost, if Others Will

President Roosevelt yesterday warned that industry must cooperate in the defense drive. At the same time there came an offer from Henry Ford to build defense materials "at cost if other manufacturers will do the same."

These actions were sequels to War Department denial of a $10,000,000 contract to Ford because he refused to agree to Government labor policy conditions.

Rapid-fire developments appeared to signal an approaching governmental showdown on the roles of labor and industry in the defense effort. The day's developments:

The President's View

President Roosevelt said at a press conference that he believed the Government should take over any plant handling defense orders if that action were essential. The statement came as a reply to a reporter asking if the Government would take over the Ford plant for not cooperating. If the word Ford were left out his answer would be yes, the President said.

Ford wired a statement from his winter home in Georgia to his Detroit offices offering to produce defense materials "at cost" if other manufacturers would do the same.

Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, told a Congressional

D. C. Leaders Vote to Form Civic Assembly

An overwhelming majority of delegates from 279 Washington civic, professional and patriotic groups last night voted in favor of the formation of a municipal assembly for the District of Columbia.

To the more than 500 citizens, including Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who packed Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, speakers outlined the plan described by one of them as "the best way to fit together the jigsaw puzzle" of the various factions of Capital citizenry.

After three hours of spirited discussion by panel speakers and audience spokesmen, punctuated by vehement opposition, the meeting voted that a constitution and by-laws for the civic body be drawn up not later than February 15.

Sefton Darr, former District Bar Association president, who presided, was elected temporary chairman of the assembly and Mrs. Lois Sentman was named secretary. The first Story With a Happy Ending

A 'Good Nurse' and Mother Saves Life of Her Baby Son

For the comfort her nursing brought others, Mrs. Sara Neale was repaid richly last night with the life of her 6-week-old son, Johnny.

Mrs. Neale is remembered at Georgetown Hospital as one of their "good nurses," and her own skill brought the infant back after he had been overcome by gas escaping from the pilot light of their kitchen stove.

She went to feed the baby in the bedroom of their apartment at 2801 Cortland Place Northwest, and found him unconscious in his crib.

Alone with the child, she applied artificial respiration, opened the bedroom window for fresh air—and after the baby was breathing again, called for help.

Dr. Merle I. Corey, of 3751 Jenifer Street Northwest, came and said the baby was fine and in no danger.

A Fire Department rescue squad and police officers came, and had nothing left but to report the rescue. The gas company truck came and repaired the faulty pilot light.

Johnny's father, John R. Neale, sr., assistant to the vice president in charge of real estate loans for the American Security & Trust Co., rushed home from a Board of Trade meeting to find "mother and baby doing well."

Mrs. Neale, the former Sara Ganley, had been a nurse at Georgetown Hospital three years before her marriage. The baby was born there. One of her former supervisors, told of the rescue, said that Mrs. Neale was "one of the good nurses, and would always know what to do."

Rome, Jan. 31.—The expulsion of the Benedictine monks from their famous monastery at Bregenz, Austria, was learned at the Vatican today. About a week ago German police agents visited the Abbot and gave orders that the friars were to leave within 18 hours.

The monks were only allowed to take their personal effects and 70 marks. All the rest had to be left, including the world famous library.

Servant Acquitted In Assault Case

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 31 (AP).—Joseph Spell, 31, colored servant accused of criminally assaulting his employer, Mrs. Eleanor Strubing, of Greenwich, was acquitted tonight by a superior court jury of six men and six women.

The jury deliberated nearly 13 hours before reaching a verdict.

Dead Ambassador Quoted

Wheeler Predicted 'Inevitable' Nazi Europe, Roosevelt Says

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Conflict between President Roosevelt and Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, leader of opposition to the lend-lease bill, flared again yesterday when the President asserted that in 1935 he was told that Wheeler had said Nazi domination of Europe was inevitable and that the United States ought to take over Canada, Mexico and the Central American republics.

Mr. Roosevelt told reporters at a press conference that William E. Dodd, former Ambassador to Germany, had informed him Wheeler made the statements at a dinner party given at the Georgetown home of Rexford G. Tugwell, then Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

The President's assertions about Wheeler came in answer to questions about the accuracy of a magazine article purporting to quote from entries in Dodd's private diary at the time.

The President's remarks about the Montana Senator yesterday marked his second outburst against Wheeler in three weeks.

On January 10 Mr. Roosevelt denounced as "the rottenest thing that has been said in public life in my generation" a statement by Wheeler that the "lend-lease" measure would result in "plowing under every fourth American child."

Yesterday the President made a special effort not to be the first to

We'll do ourselves some harm.

Sunday's Post brings you the story of Lord Halifax, member of England's War Cabinet and Ambassador to the United States; his personal history, his difficult assignment, the importance of his job here.

And the Gallup Poll tells you how many Americans think Aid-to-Britain is dragging us closer and closer to entering the war—how many think it's helping to keep us out. A timely and unusually interesting poll. Don't miss it.

Army of More Than 1,418,000 Men Planned

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

A further expansion of the Army involving the creation of additional combat divisions, is planned by the War Department when the present goal of a 1,418,000-man military force is reached this summer.

Officials said yesterday they contemplate organizing several more Regular Army infantry divisions when existing units reach war strength. Establishment of other divisions to take the place of the National Guard in active service when the militia completes its year of training is also in view, it was stated.

Since the world conditions may cause a drastic revision of the program, the number of additional units scheduled to be set up next summer and fall has not been definitely fixed, and Congress will not be asked for funds for the increase for some time, it was said.

A sliding scale expansion program has been worked out by the general staff, ranging up to an Army of 4,000,000. Such a plan, however, would not be put into effect unless the Nation were facing an "out out" major war.

Unless a major emergency is at hand next fall, the Army high command does not intend to ask Congress to extend the active service of the National Guard, as some Guard leaders have feared. They reminded that at the end of the Guard's year of training, the selectees assigned to it still will have two or three months to serve in their 12-month period.

Officials say that under the present outlook the Guard will be sent home and the selectees will be transferred to new divisions. The latter will become the noncoms of the new units, while the officers will be drawn from the Officers Reserve Corps.

At the present time, there are 675,000 men in active service, forming 24 divisions—nine Regular Army Infantry, twelve Guard, two armored and one Cavalry. By July, six more Guard divisions will be mobilized and the number of armored and horse units will be doubled. The Army will then total 1,418,000 men.

Roosevelt Recalls Wheeler's Views

introduce Wheeler's name into the press conference questioning. By cross-questioning and negative replies he jockeyed a reporter into saying that Wheeler was the Senator referred to in the Dodd diary as author of the statements. Then the President went ahead and acted as what he termed a corroborative witness for the magazine allegations.

The statements that prompted yesterday's remarks about Wheeler by the President appeared in the February 1, 1941, issue of "Liberty," the weekly magazine, under the title: "Ambassador to Hitler: The Private Diary of William E. Dodd."

The matter came up when a reporter told of reading the diary in the magazine and summarized it for the President, asking for comment.

The reporter asked Mr. Roosevelt to name the "certain Senator" to whom the article attributed the views on nazilism, but the President parried questions until finally a newsman remarked that Dodd's son had said the Senator was Wheeler.

Pharaphrasing the remarks and questions of reporters, the President said they were telling him that Dodd had dined at Tugwell's home and had said in his diary afterward that he had talked with several people, one of whom Dodd's son said was Wheeler.

His story, Mr. Roosevelt said, was that Dodd had told him the same thing the next day.

Implications of "Inevitable"

Asked whether Nazi domination of Europe had been mentioned at the dinner, the President said it had and that Dodd had told him about it directly.

Was it being asserted that Wheeler favored Nazi domination of Europe, a reporter asked.

He (Wheeler) said it was inevitable, the President replied.

What does one do if he has made up his mind that something is inevitable? Mr. Roosevelt asked. The word "inevitable," he said, is pretty comprehensive.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was refusing to comment on the alleged statements by Wheeler, that he was acting merely as a corroborative witness.

"Have you reason to believe that those are still Senator Wheeler's views," a newsman asked.

That is an iffy question, the President replied.

Dodd died in January, 1940. He was American Ambassador to Germany from 1933 to 1937.

opposition to American convoys of merchant ships to Britain, and also to the further transfer of "any naval vessels to anybody."

"The most important type of help we could give would, I presume, be in the air," he said.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, asked whether to give up any more ships "would seriously impair our fleet."

"No doubt about it," replied the Secretary. He made it clear, however, that he approved the transfer of 50 destroyers for naval bases last summer because "we then felt ourselves stronger than we were before."

Asked if the bill empowered the President to give away the Navy, Secretary Knox replied affirmatively, but ridiculed the suggestion.

"No man has a deeper or more abiding interest or much more comprehensive knowledge of the American Navy than President Roosevelt," he observed.

Secretary Knox told the committee that he felt the present emergency is "impossible to exaggerate." The United States, he said, is being "awfully slow to meet this crisis—vital time is now being lost."

Senator Nye questioned the witness at great length on the possibility of this country's actual entrance into war, a possibility that Secretary Knox refused to deny.

Won't "Shut the Door"

Knox insisted that he was opposed to American involvement in the war, but when Senator Nye pressed him on whether he still held the view that Europe "is not the place for our boys," the Secretary replied:

"I'm not going to shut the door. If the vital interests of the United States are at stake, we will have to fight no matter where—and if we don't, we won't have a country."

"You foresee that situation?" suggested the Senator.

"No, I didn't say that," snapped Knox, his face reddening and voice rising, "but when only fighting will preserve the integrity of the United States, we'll fight no matter where it is."

He agreed with the Senator that if shots were fired at an American convoy, "that would be a very great incitement—when they get to shooting at you, war isn't very far away." But he reminded the committee that he is not in favor of convoys.

Contradicts Lindbergh

Of all the witnesses who opposed the pending bill at hearings before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Knox singled out Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for special mention.

Lindbergh's suggestion that "it might be possible now to effect a stable negotiated peace between Great Britain and Germany is a wild fancy," the Secretary said.

Declaring that he respected Lindbergh's knowledge of commercial aviation, he asserted that "I consider his (Lindbergh's) statements pertaining to the strategic employment of military aviation as disclosing his lack of knowledge on this subject."

Secretary Knox outlined the development of Nazi power—in case of a British defeat—in these terms:

"We can be very sure that the devious diplomatic, economic and political methods which Germany has employed toward all the countries near her would also in the future be employed in the regions to the south of us.

"First would come economic penetration, next economic dependence, then political immigration and political interference. After that we would see the establishment of puppet regimes under Nazi or native control, and finally the arming of those countries, and their military domination by Nazis. The cycle would be complete. European militarism would be established in a world that has had the atmosphere of peace and freedom."

In a long examination, Senator Nye repeatedly read to Secretary Knox statements he had made attacking President Roosevelt and the Administration before he was named to the Cabinet.

Minority Report Assails Lease Bill

bill in committee.

The report was filed by Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio. Other minority signers included Representative Fish, of New York; Chiperfield, of Illinois; Mundt, of South Dakota; Jonkman, of Michigan, and Mrs. Bolton, of Ohio (all Republicans).

Fear "Absolute Power"

"We would willingly support a straight-forward bill which would grant Britain $2,000,000 worth of credit," said the minority statement.

"This would eliminate the step of giving the President absolute power over every concern in this country manufacturing war materials. This would not permit him to be director of the war in England; a position which is fraught with great danger to the American people."

The committee minority, which will embody credit grant proposals in a complete substitute for the bill, listed the following other amendments they will offer:

A one-year limit on the law.

Certification in writing by Army and Navy officers that supplies loaned are not needed for national defense before arms can be sent.

Prohibition on release of Naval vessels without consent of Congress.

Prohibition on use of American ports to repair British warships.

A flat ban on use of American vessels to transfer goods to Britain and a ban on convoying of merchantmen by the American Navy.

Would Require Security

The Republican substitute for the bill will propose that the $2,000,000,000 credit be made available to Britain for purchasing arms in this country "when her dollar balance is exhausted, requiring reasonable collateral security if available."

Following last night's general Republican House conference, Minority Leader Martin told reporters he did not address his colleagues "because I don't want to make this a partisan matter." He said the main objections to the bill voiced at the conference were aimed at the power grant.

Chairman Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee weathered a cross-fire of criticism of the bill when he appeared before the House Rules Committee to ask right of way to the floor.

Cox to Vote for Bill

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, said he would vote for the bill, but he was supporting it "on the basis that it's a war measure." Cox asked Bloom if he thought "this country is neutral."

"No, but we are just as neutral as any other nation," replied Bloom.

Questioning the Foreign Affairs chairman on the two-year time limitation, the Georgian said this would not prevent contracts that would bind "this Government 'til doomsday."

Stettinius Asks Machine-Tool Priority Rule

Admission of a critical shortage in machine tool manufacturing capacity and production was seen yesterday in the request by E. R. Stettinius, jr., director of the Office of Production Management's priorities division, that beginning March 1, machine tool deliveries be made only to customers working on orders with priority ratings.

Although Stettinius' request, made by letter to all machine tool builders, was placed on a voluntary basis, it was anticipated that all manufacturers would comply. The result, it was said, would be that for several months at least, until the shortages had been made up, total production of the vital manufacturing equipment would be directed exclusively to military and defense purposes.

Although OPM Director General William S. Knudsen recently forecast that "we will be over the hump by April or May" in machine tool production, fear was expressed yesterday that the "tight situation" will increase in seriousness particularly if there is an attempt to accelerate the aid to Britain and defense programs in the next few months.

An indication of the present shortage, defense experts said, was the fact that recently prices for second-hand machine tools have skyrocketed and are now higher than for for the new material. The explanation is that the newly produced machine tools, already contracted for on priority orders, cannot be purchased in the open market. Manufacturers of goods for civilian and commercial consumption are forced to fill their machine tool requirements, if they can, only from the second-hand market.

Machine tools, the cutting instruments used in making other tools, have been a defense "bottleneck" and the subject of urgent attention by defense commission experts for many months.

Stettinius' letter read in part:

"Inasmuch as machine tools are so urgently needed, it has been decided, in order to conserve the supply for national defense needs, that we ask you to cease making shipments of machine tools beginning 30 days from the date of this letter, except to those customers who have by that time or thereafter secured official priority ratings."

Phelps-Dodge Workers Strike

met with Max W. Babb, company president, and other Allis-Chalmers representatives. Federal conciliators attended the meeting.

"I received the impression that the company was unwilling to negotiate at all," Thomas stated.

The recent labor disputes brought fresh talk in Washington of legislation to restrict work stoppages on defense projects, but a spokesman said the War Department was not ready to recommend any "coercive" legislation at this time.

Testifying before the House Military Affairs Committee, Robert Patterson, Undersecretary of War, expressed the opinion, too, that "the degree of slow-up has been overestimated."

Reporters brought up the question of restrictive legislation at President Roosevelt's press conference, but the Chief Executive turned their inquiries aside. Asked about various specific proposals, he pleaded only general familiarity with them.

The Phelps-Dodge strike affected 1,600 workmen. Union representatives said the company had refused a request for a collective bargaining election which the company, in turn, said would void a current contract with an employes' association.

The union asserted that unless there was a quick settlement, the strike would spread to other Phelps-Dodge plants at Yonkers, N. Y.; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Los Angeles.

Wylie Brown, president of Phelps-Dodge, said the plants had $30,000,000 in Army and Navy contracts, and that more than $200,000,000 in defense orders were dependent on the plants supplying other manufacturers with materials.

Otherwise, there were these current major disputes:

Harvester Negotiations Held Up

Chicago—Negotiations for settlement of C. I. O. strike at Chicago plant of International Harvester Co. held up temporarily by illness of management representative. Plant employs 6,500 and, company spokesmen said, has "several million dollars" of defense orders.

Mobile, Ala.—About 3,400 employes of Alabama Drydock & Shipbuilding Co, idle as result of C. I. O. strike. Company's defense work includes contract to repair destroyers for the Navy.

Steel's Big 5 Pledge Effort At Expansion

By Alfred Friendly.
Post Staff Writer

The steel industry will study possibilities of gradual expansion of over-all capacity, the Office of Production Management announced last night after a conference by Director General William S. Knudsen with the heads of the Nation's five largest steel companies.

Knudsen discussed the need for new facilities with Ernest T. Weir, of National Steel Corporation; Tom M. Girdler, of Republic Steel; Eugene G. Grace, of Bethlehem Steel; Benjamin F. Fairless, of United States Steel, and Edward L. Ryerson, jr., of Inland Steel.

The steelmasters indicated they wished to collaborate with OPM officials in the light of recommendations expected soon in a report on the industry by Gano Dunn, engineer and industrialist on the OPM staff.

Expanded in 1940

Knudsen was told that the industry, which is now operating at about 99 per cent of its 83,000,000-ton annual capacity, had expanded its production facilities by about 2,500,000 tons in 1940. Expansion in 1941 is expected to be somewhat greater, it was said.

Meantime, defense experts were studying reports that iron and steel production for British orders was piling up at steel mills in this country through lack of shipping.

Although there is no unusually large quantity of steel on Eastern seaboard docks awaiting shipment, ti was said that representatives of both the steel industry and the British purchasing commission in New York have indicated a serious shipping shortage and have noted that urgently needed British steel supplies were pyramiding in certain mills and plants.

Production Still Problem

Maritime Commission and transportation officials admitted that the shipping situation was growing "tight" from British losses and convoy strictures, but believed that the situation had not yet reached serious proportions. They declared that production rather than transportation was the critical problem and that if steel mills could turn out the products for England, means would be adequate to transport them.

Whatever the reason, trade statistics revealed that American exports of iron and steel to the United Kingdom, prime war essentials, have been falling in recent months. In August of last year, according to Commerce Department data, 653,866 gross tons of iron and steel were sent to Great Britain. In October only 461,489 gross tons were exported, and only 400,953 in November. January figures, not yet compiled, are expected to show about the same total, while forecasts for February are for an amount even less than 400,000 tons, it was learned.

Edison Refuses To Extradite Burns

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 31 (AP).—Gov. Charles Edison refused today to grant the extradition to Georgia of Robert Elliott Burns, who twice escaped from a chain gang.

Edison wrote to Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia that he believed former Gov. A. Harry Moore's refusal, after a public hearing, to grant the extradition was a "finality."

"This puts a period on the Burns case," Edison commented as he announced his decision.

Burns, author of "I Am a Fugitive From a Georgia Chain Gang," now lives in Union, N. J.

9 Bund Chiefs Jailed Under Hatred Law

By the Associated Press

Newton, N. J., Jan. 31.—A rural judge who ruled there was "no room in this country" for anti-semitism today sentenced Wilhelm Kunze, national leader of the German-American Bund, and eight associates to serve 1 year to 14 months in prison.

Two of the nine were fined $2,000 each and the others, $1,000 each.

Three speeches made at the Bund's Camp Nordland in nearby Andover last June led to their indictment under New Jersey's "race hatred" law.

Judge John C. Losey set bail at $2,000 each pending an appeal which defense counsel said would be taken to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

Bail was posted for Kunze, August Klapprott, of Andover, the Bund's Eastern regional leader; Matthias Kohler, Irvington, State Bund treasurer, and Paul Schnaarschmidt, Paterson, Camp Nordland trustee.

Sheriff Denton J. Quick said, however, that the following five were lodged in the county jail for the night, bail failing to arrive before the county clerk's office closed:

The Rev. John C. Fitting, Union City, State Bund secretary.

Carl Schipphorst, Glen Rock, camp trustee.

Richard Schiele, Paterson, trustee.

George Neuppert, Cliffside Park, trustee.

With the exception of Clark, each was sentenced to prison and fined $1,000 for permitting the speeches. Clark's prison term and fine were for making a speech, while Klapprott and Kohler were fined an extra $1,000 for making speeches.

Roosevelt Warns Manufacturers

committee that the department was considering inclusion of provisions in all future contracts requiring compliance with all labor laws, but that the matter was "still in the making."

A War Department spokesman, however, said that refusal of the contract to Ford Thursday did not mean that labor standards provisions would be included in all future Army contracts.

Requested by Hillman

Under questioning, Patterson admitted that the labor clause was put in the contract at the request of Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office for Production Management.

President Roosevelt revealed that the Cabinet at its weekly meeting yesterday had discussed taking over patent rights to further the defense program.

Fargo Gets Contract

The War Department awarded a contract Thursday for 11,781 Army trucks to the Fargo Motor Corporation, of Detroit, even though Ford had been the lowest bidder.

Ford was denied the contract, worth $10,298,128, because his bid took exception to a contract specification requiring compliance with "provisions of procurement circular No. 43."

That circular was a statement by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, requiring compliance by Army contractors with the labor policy statement adopted last fall by the Defense Commission and approved by the President. It called for compliance with all Federal and State labor laws.

Harry H. Bennett, personnel director of the Ford company, said yesterday that Ford made this statement in offering to manufacture arms "at cost":

"There ought not to be any quibbling about bidding on defense contracts. All companies ought to do what the Government wants them to do without making profit. Nobody should make any profit on defense production anyway. It's profit in the manufacture of war materials that causes war."

A Warning to the Few

The President's disclosure that taking over patent rights is under Cabinet discussion was interpreted as a new warning to a few industrialists.

It was learned that magnesium and aluminum patents are the chief ones being considered for condemnation.

An old law gives the Government power to merely begin using private patents and allow itself to be sued for royalties by the patent-holder.

An amendment to the Selective Service law gives the Government power to take over factories that do not cooperate with national defense and, it is learned, this statute is one that might be used to carry out the President's suggestion.

It was a legal question, the President said, whether the statute permitting conscription of industry applied also to patents.

Patents, he said, are as essential to the manufacturer of defense products as plants, and the matter of taking them over is under study. The current studies cover both domestic and foreign patents, the President said.

41,000 Tons of British Ships Sunk by U-Boats, Nazis Report

By Joseph W. Grigg, Jr.
United Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Jan. 31.—Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, echoing Adolf Hitler's warning that Germany's "U-boat war will begin in the spring," said in a proclamation tonight that a formidable submarine fleet is ready to lead the way to victory.

Raeder's proclamation was issued, with emphasis in the Fuehrer's threat to torpedo every ship bearing war aid to Britain, after claims that German U-boats and bombing planes have sunk more than 41,000 additional tins of shipping around the British Isles.

The admiral thanked the great force of workers engaged in U-boat construction.

"In an unparalleled shirt time," said Raeder, "you have constructed the best U-boats in the world which will lead to victory at the decisive time."

Spokesmen said that the Fuehrer made it clear that German submarines, planes and surface raiders would "sink any and all ships from any part of the world" attempting to bring aid to Britain, adding:

"The Fuehrer's meaning was quite clear. Ships from any part of the world coming within the already defined zone of war operations around Britain will be sunk whether convoyed by warships or not."

The official DNB agency said that "small" groups of Nazi bombers today attacked "important" military objectives of London and vicinity, in attacks much like those carried out against the British capital Thursday.

German long-range guns along the French Channel coast also fired on "military objectives in southeast England" (the Dover area) while German pursuit planes shot down 12 British barrage balloons—5 over Dover and 7 over London—in Thursday's attacks, the high command's communique said.

A long-range German bomber today attacked and sank two enemy steamers, one of 5,000 tons and the other somewhat larger, it was stated. One of the ships was sunk 100 miles west of the Hebrides and the other 250 miles off the Scottish coast, a spokesman said.

The high command said that 260 miles west of Donegal Bight, Ireland, Thursday a German bomber sank the 3,677-ton British steamer Austvard with two direct hits.

A submarine returning to its base reported the sinking of 27,000 tons of enemy shipping, today's communique said.

The high command said that a number of R. A. F. planes on the ground at London and a munitions dump northwest of the British capital were blown up Thursday and that bomb hits also "destroyed" several factory buildings east of Cambridge.

Mildenhall, Watisham and Honnington were named as among the British airfields attacked. One German plane was admitted to be lost in the attacks.

U. S. Observer Hit In London Raid

took Harry L. Hopkins, President Roosevelt's special emissary, on a three-hour tour of Britain's biggest naval base at Portsmouth and led dockworkers in a vociferous "three cheers for the President of the United States."

He introduced Hopkins to Portsmouth city fathers as "the envoy and friend of President Roosevelt, that great statesman and friend of freedom and democracy" and added: "One cannot help feeling enormously encouraged by the spirit of the ever-growing movement of aid to Britain which we see laying hold of the mighty masses in the United States."

Still another American, Wendell L. Willkie, slogged through the mud of Britain's invasion defenses in the Dover area and concluded: "I wouldn't like to be the German attacking these defenses."

Willkie, witnessing some slight cross-Channel shelling, dismissed it as "not amounting to much."

Two Nazis Shot Down

The direct hit on the one London hospital came while persons injured by bombs falling in nearby streets were being given first aid treatment. Some members of the staff were injured seriously and patients sustained minor injuries.

Despite the difficulty of spotting the high-flying raiders above the clouds, British fighters were credited officially with shooting down two attacking bombers.

One of the downed raiders was shot out of the clouds at Plumpton, near Lewes in Sussex, and the other was sent plunging into the sea off Porthcurno, in Cornwall.

The trawlers Charmouth and Rattray reported shooting down a German bomber which dropped a stick of bombs near them.

When the attacker swooped and machine-gunned the small boats, it was said, the fishermen returned the fire and finally drove the plane off in flames. It was reported to have plunged into the sea some miles away.

Indo-China, Thailand End 4-Month War

By Frank L. Martin, jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Saigon, French Indo-China, Jan. 31.—Thailand (Siam) and French Indo-China ended four months of undeclared warfare along their 1,000-mile jungle-covered border today with an armistice drafted by Japanese mediators and signed aboard the Japanese light cruiser Natori.

The agreement left Thai forces in possession of several areas in Cambodia, southern Indo-China, and one section in Laos, in the north. It established a neutral zone extending 10 kilometers (6.21 miles) on either side of a line fixed as the front at the official hour of cessation of hostilities, 10 a. m., January 28 (although fighting actually continued some hours longer).

This is to be the demarcation line pending signature of a peace treaty to be negotiated at Tokyo with Japan as mediator. The Thai forces had pushed well into Cambodia at several points and into Laos in one district. Thailand claims territory in both provinces which she says the French snatched from her half a century ago.

Lines Demarked

The armistice stipulates that:

Within 72 hours of the signing, infantry of both sides shall be withdrawn from the demarcation line which roughly parallels the boundary except for the points of Thai penetration.

Neither navy shall cross a line extended from the border into the Gulf of Siam, and planes are to be held at least 20 kilometers (12.42 miles) in the rear of the armistice lines.

No date for the beginning of the Tokyo peace negotiations was set in the armistice which stipulated that the cessation of hostilities may be prolonged indefinitely.

As the French and Thai delegates signed, the Natori swung at anchor in the Saigon River, near this city, winter administrative seat of the colony.

Japanese Warships Nearby

Two Japanese cruisers, two aircraft carriers and two torpedo boats were reported lying off Cap St. Jacques, 50 miles south of here.

A Japanese naval spokesman in Shanghai described the reported concentration of Japanese naval units as "a necessity in connection with the armistice negotiations." He said he was not informed whether Japan would "guarantee" enforcement of the armistice terms.

The Japanese naval concentration had enhanced belief in some quarters that further Japanese activities in Indo-China were imminent.

Senate Unit Asks Extra 350 Million For Cargo Ships

The Senate Appropriations Committee approved yesterday a $350,000,000 emergency program for construction of 200 steel cargo vessels.

The committee recommended enactment of House-approved legislation which would appropriate $313,500,000 to be used with $36,500,000 available from other sources for building the ships and constructing new ship yards.

Besides the emergency $350,000,000 appropriation, the Senate committee wrote into the legislation a $65,000,000 contract authorization for the Maritime Commission's regular building program. This would supplement $48,000,000 of unused contracting authority the commission has at present.

Public Barred As Navy Launches New Submarine

New London, Conn., Jan. 31 (AP).—The submarine Grayback, the United States Navy's latest undersea craft, slid swiftly down the ways here today in a grim atmosphere and with a minimum of fanfare. The public was barred from the launching for the first time in years.

Mrs. Wilson Brown, wife of the rear admiral superintendent of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., sponsored the Grayback.

Liner Is Launched

Newport News, Va., Jan. 31 (AP).—The S. S. President Adams, fifth of seven combination passenger-cargo vessels being built by the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. for the Maritime Commission's round-the-world service, was launched by the local yard at noon today.

Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General, crashed a bottle of champagne into the prow of the 9,300-ton liner as it began to move down the ways.

Danes Quietly Await Ripe Time To Oust Nazis, Refugee Says

Germans Will Ruin Area Economically, Mrs. L. M. Hansen Says

MRS. LUBOW M. HANSEN

Mrs. Lubow Margolena Hansen, now living at 1920 Sunderland Place Northwest, watched the waves of German planes "fill the sky" over Copenhagen, Denmark, last April, then witnessed the first four months of the occupation and it convinced her that 99 per cent of the population is now hopefully awaiting the day when it "is given rifles with which to resist."

But "the time for revolt or even sabotage has not come," said Mrs. Hansen, wife of Dr. Parne Hansen, bacteriologist, who was at the Royal Polytechnic University in Copenhagen when the Germans came.

The Danes never since the occupation have had anything to do with the Germans, she emphasized. That 99 per cent of them detest the Nazis, she was convinced and that some day they will give a demonstration of their attitude, she was certain.

The Nazi soldiers had written orders making politeness a routine course of their conduct, she said, but the gesture captured no response. Once, she recalled, the Danes announced that they would hold a series of celebrations in line with custom. The Germans heard of it and arranged to send photographers, aiming to use the pictures to show how happy were the Danes in the occupied condition. But the celebrants heard about it and disbanded.

Otherwise, she remembered the Germans as gluttons for whipped cream and chocolate bars. They would stand before store windows and look at candy like children, she said. They bought it as long as money lasted.

Win or lose, the Germans will leave Denmark economically ruined, Mrs. Hansen predicted, reminding that already they have carried three-quarters of the poultry from the country along with about $200,000,000 worth of goods and commodities. "There is no more normal life; the people simply live from day to day," she remembered.

They look principally to the British for deliverance, she said.

Vichy, Jan. 31 (INS).—Pope Pius was reported in some Vichy circles tonight to have renewed his endeavors looking toward early restoration of peace "in an attempt to save all Europe from anarchy and bolshevism."

After his return from Rome, where he was received in a long audience by the Pope, Cardinal Gerlier, Archbishop of Lyon and primate of France, today engaged in a series of conferences with Marshal Petain.

Vichy, Jan. 31 (AP).—Informed sources said tonight there was a strong possibility that Pierre-Etienne Flandin would resign as foreign minister as newspapers in German-occupied Paris continued a campaign against the Vichy government.

Italian Reject Protest on Death Of Two Americans

Italy has rejected "in toto" a charge by the United States that Italian bombers made a "deliberate and wanton" assault, killing one American missionary and his wife and wounding another couple at Doro, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, last August 23.

The State Department published last night an exchange of notes in which this Government demanded that Italy promptly condemn and punish those responsible for "an outrage shocking to all those who continue to preserve any respect for the principles of civilized behavior."

A curt reply from the Italian government on November 6, criticized the contents and manner of the American protest and ended by saying "it contains criticisms of the Italian armed forces which cannot but be rejected in toto."

Greeks Report Giving Enemy Two Defeats

By the Associated Press

Athens, Feb. 1 (Saturday).—The taking of Italian positions "of great importance" in mountains nearly 6,000 feet high and the smashing of an Italian tank counter-attack at another point on the Albanian front were announced early today by the Greek high command.

Earlier the Greek military spokesman had said that the latest Italian counter-assault, in the coastal sector, "met a fate worse than any" of the series recently attempted. Large Italian forces were used, he asserted.

"The Fascist troops were pursued by us and we succeeded in occupying a mountain 1,500 meters high, beyond the positions from which the Italians launched this counter-attack," the spokesman said.

At another point the Greeks occupied a height of some 2,000 meters and further to the north "repulsed the Italians from a height of 1,600 meters," he added.

Two hundred Italian prisoners, including seven officers, were declared to have been taken in the last of the series of frustrated Italian assaults.

North of Klisura, Greek forces were reported advancing rapidly and dispatches from the Albanian front said an Italian attempt to wrest the offensive was regarded now as a failure. The Greeks were reported able to move their artillery to new positions.

Military dispatches told of Greek troops striking, while the Italians still were demoralized after many costly counterattacks.

They said heaps of dead and many wounded were found in the abandoned Italian positions. A Greek physician in one sector said his men had buried 650 Italians at one point where a Fascist charge had been tried unsuccessfully.

Some Italian units were said to have lost as many as half their men. Among 200 prisoners taken in two days, a Greek spokesman declared, were several officers from units newly arrived in Albania.

In a severe snowstorm which prevented use of air forces, these reports said, the Greeks launched their attack under an artillery barrage aimed at preventing the Italians from reorganizing after their thrusts had been so heavily resisted that Italian commanders had to halt offensive action.

Premier Metaxas, who died Wednesday, was buried today after a funeral at the cathedral conducted by the Metropolitan of Athens, head of the Greek Church, and attended by the royal family, the cabinet, high military officers and members of the diplomatic corps.

Italians Claim Successes

Rome, Jan. 31 (AP).—"Effective" Italian air attacks against "enemy bridges, roads and batteries" were reported today by the Italian high command.

It said also that troops and motor columns were attacked with shrapnel bombs and machine-gun fire.

Young G.O.P. Delegates Assail Willkie

By Robert Speer.
United Press Staff Writer

Des Moines, Jan. 31.—A revolt of some factions of the National Young Republicans Federation against the leadership of Wendell L. Willkie was revealed tonight in a series of proposed resolutions, one of which described him as unqualified to speak for members of the Republican Party. The federation is in convention here.

One resolution, submitted by the South Dakota delegation, said:

"The defeated Republican candidate for President has seen fit to travel to England, purporting to be there as a private citizen when in reality he is there as the alleged leader of 22,000,000 Republicans who no longer consider him qualified to speak or gather information for them."

The resolutions were submitted at a public hearing of the organization's resolutions committee. The committee will report its recommendations tomorrow.

Backing For Lease Bill

Proposed resolutions, in addition to criticism of Willkie, ranged from indorsement of the lend-lease bill to an attack on alleged "communistic" affiliations of Harry Deck, Springfield, Ill., representative of Labor's Non-Partisan League, who is scheduled to speak at the convention's labor forum.

Resentment against the Willkie-for-President Clubs was expressed in a resolution submitted by Norton Briseth, Minneapolis.

"In the last campaign the Young Republican League and the Republican Party were deliberately sabotaged by a candidate of the Democratic faith on the Republican ticket whose campaign was epitomized by two words 'me, too,'" it said.

In the contest for office of national chairman of the organization, Goron Allott, Denver, still was regarded as the leading candidate. James Tucker, Indianapolis, secretary of State of Indiana, entered the running today, in addition to two others previously in the race; Irving W. Myers, Des Moines attorney, and John Robison, Louisville.

Assailed by Chicago Tribune

Chicago, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The Chicago Tribune, which supported the Presidential candidacy of Wendell L. Willkie, today editorially rejected his leadership as a "hoax."

"There wasn't any good to be got out of him. And let that be a lesson to all of us," it said.

The editorial charged that "throughout the campaign he (Willkie) gave away one issue after another, domestic as well as foreign. . . ."

The editorial termed the Cabinet appointments of Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, Republicans, as "a pair of old gentlemen" who yielded "to the overstrain of ambition . . ." And classing them with Willkie said "their party would just forget them."

Moyale Attacked

The R. A. F. reported dive-bombing attacks upon Moyale, in the Kenya-Ethiopian zone of fighting. Italian artillery and infantry positions were attacked.

(In Rome, the Italian high command, acknowledging the loss of Derna to the British, said that the Fascist forces had withdrawn to avoid encirclement and had taken up positions immediately to the west and south from which they had "smothered" an attack by Australian motorized troops.

(In East Africa, British attacks were said to have been repulsed in "various battles" which were not specifically located.

(The Rome radio termed the Italian evacuation of Derna a strategic move and said it was "far from an Italian defeat or a British victory." A witness was quoted as saying that British tanks "blew up like match boxes from the explosions of Italian shells" during the fighting.)

2 More Italian Ministers Reported as 'Volunteers'

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Jan. 31.—Giovanni Host-Venturi, the Italian Minister of Communications, and Rafaello Riccardi, the Italian Minister of Trade and Exchanges, are reported today to have joined the ever-growing list of volunteer ministers at the front. It appears likely that all the ministers will find themselves in the zone of operations soon.

Kirk Named Head of Naval Intelligence

The Navy yesterday appointed its naval attache at London, Capt. Alan G. Kirk, as director of naval intelligence.

Now here on leave, Capt. Kirk will relieve Rear Adm. Walter S. Anderson, who has been ordered to command the battleships of the Pacific fleet.

At the same time, the War Department named Brig. Gen. Shelley U. Marietta, now assistant surgeon general and commandant of Walter Reed Hospital, to command the Army Medical Center here. The center includes not only Walter Reed but all of the Army's medical department school and research activities in Washington.

24 Temporary Promotions

President Roosevelt, meanwhile, nominated 4 brigadier generals and 20 colonels to hold temporary advanced rank in the Army.

Four colonels now heading important civil and military agencies here were promoted to brigadier general—Col. Philip B. Fleming, Wage-Hour Administrator; Col. Donald H. Connolly, CAA Administrator; Col. Russell L. Maxwell, Administrator of Export Control, and Lieut. Col. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of construction, Quartermaster General's Office.

Brig. Gen. William E. Shedd, assistant chief of staff, was assigned to command of the Eighth Division, Fort Jackson, S. C., and promoted to major general. Three other brigadiers, recently assigned to important combat posts, also were elevated to major general—Donald C. Cubbison, First Division, commander, Fort Devens, Mass.; Clarence S. Ridley, Sixth Division commander, Fort Snelling, Minn., and Walter E. Prosser, commander of the Panama Mobile Force.

In assigning Gen. Marietta to head the medical center, the War Department said its present chief, Brig. Gen. Raymond F. Metcalfe, will retire for age in May. During the day the department also announced the appointment of Col. Frank Whitehead, of the Marine Corps, as commandant of the Army Industrial College.

Assignments Listed

Col. Whitehead, now loaned to the Army as an instructor at the school, will relieve Lieut. Col. John E. Lewis, who has been ordered to Fort Knox, Ky. Other Army colonels promoted to brigadier general, with their new assignments, include:

Ralph McT. Pennell, commander, Field Artillery Brigade, Twenty-seventh Division, Fort McClellan, Ala.
Donald A. Robinson, Chief of Staff, Second Army, Memphis, Tenn.
Leroy P. Collins, commander, Eighteenth Field Artillery Brigade, Fort Sill, Okla.
Jesse C. Drain, to command an Infantry Brigade of the Forty-first Division, Camp Murray, Wash.
Marshal G. Randol, commander, Field Artillery Brigade, Forty-first Division, Camp Murray, Wash.
John W. N. Schulz, director of purchases and contracts, Office of the Undersecretary of War.
Olin H. Longino, commander, Thirty-sixth Antiaircraft Brigade, Camp Edwards, Mass.
George F. Moore, commander, harbor defenses of Manila, Philippine Islands.
Ralph T. Haines, commander, harbor defenses of Sandy Hook, N. Y.
Alvan C. Gillem, jr., commander, Second Armored Brigade, Fort Benning, Ga.
Charles P. Hall, Third Division, Fort Lewis, Wash.
Henry Terrell jr., Eighth Division, Fort Jackson, S. C.
Wade H. Haislip, assistant chief of War Department General Staff.
Harry J. Malony, assistant chief of War Department General Staff.
Junius W. Jones, commander, Sixteenth Wing, Hdq. Air Force, Langley Field, Va.
Lieut. Col. George C. Kenney, commander, Air Corps Experimental Depot and Engineering School, Wright Field, Ohio.

Many High-Number Selects Living in a Fool's Paradise

Mrs. Elisabeth Dodge, assistant clerk of Washington Selective Service Board No. 1, has found a good share of District registrants are living in a fool's draft-and-order number paradise and yesterday she asked The Post to help her do something about it.

It's that business of the two kinds of order numbers—national and local. The national, it appears, doesn't count any more.

Mrs. Dodge says, in effect, that the home-loving lads who happily believe their induction into the United States Army is a couple of years off because they received high order numbers in the national lottery are . . . "uninformed" was the word.

Local Number Counts

What counts is not the national number, but the order number the local board figured out.

That number is usually far smaller than the national order number, and indicates that the decisive day is closer, Mrs. Dodge explained.

For example, one Washington registrant has the serial (registration) number 2543. In the national lottery in a ceremony in Departmental Auditorium the registrant saw the number chalked up as order number 6273.

With this relatively high national order number, the registrant assumed his day of call to the colors was two or three years off, at least.

However, the number of men receiving those neatly inscribed registration cards in his particular area totaled only 5,199.

And all national order numbers over 5199 were struck off in order to boil the list down to the proportions of the local board. So the registrant wound up with a local order number of 3078, and his induction probably is one to two years off, instead of two or three.

It's Complicated

Then there's that confusion between serial numbers and order numbers. The registrant will not go to camp the 2,543d in his district but the 3,078th.

And one more thing, Mrs. Dodge would like to explain: The fellows that for one reason or another register late (they're still registering at every board in town, incidentally), get a special lettered order number.

And this process, Mrs. Dodge said, is simple after you catch on to it. A man who registers in her board next week would get a serial number one higher than the total number of draft candidates signed up there by that time.

That would be up in the 4,300's. But since that serial number already had been drawn and given a national order number, some other registrant would have it.

Two selectees can't have the same order number. It's against the rules. So Mrs. Dodge in this case refers to the master list of order numbers, finds the order number which ordinarily would correspond, takes the number below it and adds an A to distinguish the future soldiers.

Well, she warned us, it is complicated.

Seven More Named To Advisory Board

Appointment of seven additional members to the Registrants Advisory Board of the local selective service setup was announced last night by Chairman Spencer Gordon.

The new members, who advise registrants seeking aid in answering classification and on other draft problems, will serve these local boards:

Board No. 16, Harry J. Daly, attorney, of the Metropolitan Bank building; Board No. 20, James H. Brashears, 1215 E Street Southeast; and Jackson P. Ravenscroft, 2830 Twenty-seventh Street Northeast, both officials of the Hamilton National Bank; Board No. 23, Ralph A. Potts, 808 H Street Northwest, and Robert W. McCullough, same address, both attorneys; and Board No. 25, Huver I. Brown, 811 Florida Avenue Northwest, and Charles D. Sanger, jr., of the Metropolitan Bank building, both lawyers.

Latins Vote New Tariff Principle

By John W. White
Copyright by New York Times

Montevideo, Uruguay, Jan. 31.—The regional conference of the River Plate set up a new principle in inter-American economic relations today when it approved a draft convention suspending operation of the most favored nation clause in dealings between Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay.

The convention affects the relations of these countries, the participants in the conference, with all other countries of the world because it provides that concessions agreed upon shall remain in force only so long as they are not extended to other countries by the usual most favored nation clause.

Another principle set up in the resolution declares ferryboats to be extensions of the roads they connect and therefore should be freed from delays over port formalities.

These points were outstanding in the first day of real work by the conference on the imposing pile of projects submitted for its consideration.

Three subcommittees approved one convention and three resolutions and passed them up to full committees.

Unless unforseen opposition arises somewhere along the usual routine of conference operation, the actions of the subcommittees will stand as the conference's decision on the matters treated. No such opposition is expected, since all five participating delegations are represented on the subcommittees and the subcommittee members are authorized representatives of the full delegations.

As one of the most pressing problems of the conference is to expedite its work to complete its tasks within the time allotted, it is expected that the full committees and then the plenary sessions will simply act as rubber stamp of approval on the conclusions of the subcommittees.

Among the resolutions approved during the day was a proposal by Argentina for studying the feasibility of organizing customs unions.

Spell Acquitted In Strubing Attack Case

By the Associated Press

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 31.—Joseph Spell, 31-year-old colored servant accused of criminally assaulting his employer, Mrs. Eleanor Strubing, attractive Greenwich socialite, was acquitted tonight by a Superior Court jury of six men and six women.

The jury deliberated nearly 13 hours.

As the foreman announced the acquittal, audible gasps came from several in the courtroom. Spectators included Philip Strubing, a Philadelphia attorney and brother-in-law of Mrs. Strubing.

She and her husband, John K. Strubing, jr., former Princeton athlete, were absent, however.

State's Attorney Lorin W. Willis, who had asked the jury for a conviction lest "shame and disgrace" fall upon Mrs. Strubing, moved that Spell's bail be continued until the State could determine "what course of action is to be pursued." The defense did not oppose the motion.

Spell, exclaiming "What a relief!" told newsmen:

"I'm going back to my sick mother in Louisiana where I should have been."

He was arrested last December 11 in the basement of the Strubing home after Mrs. Strubing had been found on the banks of Kensico Reservoir in North Castle, N. Y., and sobbed out to police a story of having been thrice raped by "my houseman," who, she said, "must have gone berserk."

He had driven her to the reservoir and thrown her into the water, she charged.

Testifying at the trial for a day and a half last week, Mrs. Strubing said Spell, who had been in her employ as a butler and chauffeur less than two months, accosted her in her bedroom as she emerged from a shower bath, attacked her, made her write a ransom note to her husband who was away at the time and then took her on a wild automobile ride.

Spell, defended by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, stolidly denied her story. His only purpose in going to her room, he maintained, was to ask for money for his mother and he declared he had been "led on" by his employer.

He testified he left her at the reservoir at her own request, and drove away only when she refused to heed his calls to return to the car.

Report Asked On Guarding Of U. S. Files

Senator Brewster (Republican), of Maine, yesterday introduced a resolution calling upon the Secretary of War, the Secretary of Navy, and the Civil Service Commission to report to the Senate on precautions taken to guard governmental records.

Calling attention to the disclosure that confidential files had been removed from the offices of the Civil Service Commission, Senator Brewster suggested that the agencies cited in the resolution inform the Senate if additional legislation is needed to safeguard national defense information.

"During recent months in connection with our defense program," he said, "catastrophes have occurred."

"Whether these are attributable to carelessness or sabotage or to the necessary margin we must allow for human error remains to be determined.

New Conception Needed

"It would appear, however, that our administrative agencies should be moving rapidly toward a revised conception of the protection that is now required in view of recent revelations as to what has gone on abroad in the new techniques of total war.

"Meanwhile, the Senate may prudently receive assurance that no action on our part is required in either legislation or appropriation to provide for the proper protection of the men and material essential to our defense."

Brewster's resolution was referred to the Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

Jackson Pleads Guilty

Meanwhile, Walter C. Jackson, 30, fourth man arrested in connection with taking of thousands of confidential Civil Service Commission records, yesterday pleaded guilty to a charge of unlawful removal of Government property before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Three other men arrested during investigation of the situation pleaded not guilty before Turnage and were held for preliminary hearings later. The men, also charged with removal of Government property, are Harlan W. Crandall, 29, free on $1,000 bond, and Lawrence L. Haynes, 29, and Wallace H. Haynes, 26, free on $500 bond.

Jackson was held to the grand jury and posted $500 bond. He is a brother-in-law of the two Haynes, who operate the Standard Business Service, 427 Tenth Street Northwest. This firm is said to have used the lists to compile lists of Government employes for business purposes.

Leaders Vote For Civic Assembly

meeting was set for not later than February 28.

Over a local radio hookup Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican), of Ohio, deemed a municipal expert after three terms as Mayor of Cleveland, supported the assembly as a means to promote civic interests so Washington could take its place "as host city of the Federal Government."

"One of the greatest blessings of self-government should be its closeness to the people governed. I am hopeful that a municipal assembly here would go far to keep the community life of the District in tune with the needs, both of the United States Government and of the people of the District," Senator Burton said.

"Let us forge an instrumentality that will bring out the leadership in our various organizations and representing all shades of thought, opinion and interest in the District, secure unified civic action," was the theme expressed in brief talks by Mrs. Harold A. Stone, chairman of the legislative committee of the District League of Women Voters; Sidney Katz, secretary of the District-Maryland C. I. O. organization; Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the Parent-Teachers Association of the District; Dr. Ernest S. Griffith, Library of Congress official; Prof. Wilkerson, of Howard University, and Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, vice president of the Friday Evening Club.

Chief opposition speaker was Harry S. Wender, first vice president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

Asserting that the citizen's federation and individual citizen groups adequately performed the civic function held out for the proposed assembly, Wender declared formation of the body would supplant the very efficient instrumentalities we have at present."

Urging members in citizen's bodies as a means of expressing neighborhood and city needs, Wender said, "You are derelict in your duty if you are not members of citizen's associations."

The federation official defended division of opinion on the part of citizen groups, declaring this an illustration of democratic processes. "We shall continue to be divided . . . there is only one place I know of where everyone votes Ja," one said.

Others who took prominent parts in the discussion included Ernest H. Pullman, of the American Legion civic relations committee; Miss Etta Taggart, president of the Washingtonians; Culver B. Chamberlain, of the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association, and Sylvester L. McLaurin, of the Federation of Civic Associations.

Capital Still Talking About A Happy Day

Washington yesterday pulled down the curtain on the "greatest show of them all" as Hollywood celebrities winged their way home and local officials counted receipts of the President's Birthday Ball celebrations.

Executive Vice Chairman Richmond B. Keech predicted the receipts would exceed last year's $66,000.

Tired but still talking about their exciting visit, Lana Turner and her mother left by train for New York before returning to the Coast. Lana said she wanted to see a show or two before "going back to work."

Still Talking About It

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who attended many of the functions Thursday night, yesterday expressed his appreciation for the aid given the committee by the District officials.

Throughout the city, favorite topic of conversation was Miss Turner or that funny man, Red Skelton, who wowed audiences at the hotels and theaters, and the gracious First Lady, who led the stars a fast pace to the series of merrymaking balls.

Even at the White House the usual 10:30 a. m. press conference was put off until later in the day so the President could sleep a while longer.

Before leaving for the Coast, Wally Beery gave several hundred students of the National Training School for Boys the "thrill of a lifetime" by making a personal appearance and talking to them, of all things, about aviation.

A lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve, Beery refrained from mentioning anything about Beery the actor, but urged the youngsters to enter the aviation field. He was accompanied by James V. Bennett, director, Bureau of Prisons, and Daff Terrell, of Loew's Theatre.

Get Big Ovation

The Hollywood star, who performed for the President's Birthday Ball Thursday night, was met at the Bladensburg Road institution by the school band and then given the biggest ovation ever experienced at the school.

Berry and his charming daughter, Carol Ann, did not leave the city until last night.

One of the fellows, who made quite a hit with the dancing crowds and who was not even expected for the dances, is Tony Martin. Tony left by plane early yesterday, as did Wayne Morris and George Raft. Red Skelton and his wife, Edna Stillwater, took the train for their trek across the continent. Pretty Kay Aldridge, native of Warsaw, Va., said she was going home to call on the mayor.

Nazi Superbomber Predicted by Knox

cording to this second estimate of the situation, is merely to permit the manufacture of enough of these planes to make possible a continous mass bombing such as has never been attempted. These technicians believe that the German engineers are so confident they can deliver the knockout blow before British fighters can be redesigned that they are sacrificing armor and armament in favor of fuel and explosives.

Such machines, if available in great number, would permit the resumption of daylight bombing, which the Germans had to abandon because of their heavy losses against the efficient British fighter planes, and would make possible the steady, unremitting pounding of defense positions which German air strategists have always believed must precede an attempt at invasion—the theory of flying artillery which was first exploited in the Polish campaign.

Those experts who believe this report believe it so strongly that they are urging the air corps to slow up its own production of fighter types with a view of designing a pursuit plane capable of operating at a ceiling of 45,000 feet, even though such an airplane would have to make enormous sacrifices in armament, protective covering and probably range.

Carolyn Lee Sorry She Didn't See Mrs. Roosevelt

Five-year-old Carolyn Lee, the all but forgotten movie star of the President's Birthday Celebration, was convalescing yesterday in Children's Hospital, but she is still a sick little girl.

"Her biggest regret is having missed seeing Mrs. Roosevelt," said Mrs. Warren Copp, mother of the film starlet. "She told me that was the worst, rather than being left out of the parties."

One of the earliest arrivals, Carolyn Lee came down with acute bronchitis and was taken to Children's Hospital last Monday, where she has been a patient since.

Her temperature is down now, but even so, it will probably be several days before Carolyn Lee is discharged, her mother said.

Singing Career Nipped in the Bud

Snow and Rain Early Next Week

Snow, changing at times to rain, was forecast for the District early next week in a five-day prediction issued last night by the local Weather Bureau. Temperatures in the same period, from now until Wednesday, are expected to remain close to normal.

Fair skies but accompanied by rather cold temperatures are expected today. Maximum temperature forecast is 38 degrees, and lowest is 27. Highest yesterday was 41 2 a. m.

Shipmasters Indorse Drive Against Isms

The executive committee of the National Organization of Masters, Mates and Pilots of America, meeting in the Hamilton Hotel, yesterday indorsed the plan of the United States Maritime Commission to give ship captains the right to select their crews.

The Maritime Commission is restoring this traditional authority to ship masters as a means of ridding the American Merchant Marine of Communist and Nazi seamen.

In approving the plan, the National Organization of Masters, Mates and Pilots said in a resolution that it would insure that "American vessels will be operated by American crews who are not only efficient in the performance of their duty but true and genuine Americans in fact, and who are completely loyal to the democratic principles that this Nation represents."

The organization strongly objected to the proposal in Congress that all merchant sailors be enrolled in the Naval Reserve, and in approving the Maritime Commission's plan it pledged itself not to resort to "unlawful blacklisting" nor in any way to impair collective bargaining rights guaranteed by law.

The National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) has described the commission's plan as an "anti-labor spy plan."

Compensation For Injured Selects Urged

Selective service trainees injured in training or in a possible future war would receive the same compensation services from the American Legion as wounded World War veterans, according to a recommendation of the National Rehabilitation Committee of the Legion at the closing session of a three-day conference at the Hamilton Hotel.

The claim service is rendered free of charge by bureaus of Legion officials who represent individuals claiming remuneration.

Also approved in the session attended by 250 Legionnaires and members of the Women's Auxiliary was a resolution for expansion of the tumor clinic service for veterans. At present such hospitals are at San Francisco, New York and Chicago. The committee seeks construction of 30 to 40 more.

Members also went on record advocating resumption of the research by Legion committees of the effects of gas on soldiers.

Mrs. Butler's Estate Left to Grandchildren

The will of Mrs. Eleanor K. Butler, widow of Dr. William K. Butler, of Chevy Chase, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans Court at Rockville, Md., bequeaths her entire estate to her grandchildren, Anna Wales and Kenneth Wales, jr. All, however, is left in trust, which is to continue until the younger child attains the age of 25, when they are to receive the principal. Arthur P. Drury, of Washington, is named executor and trustee. The will was executed November 2, 1938.

Public Counsel Bill Presented To Senate

Striking instances of miscarriage of justice result from the system of assigning counsel to indigent defendants in United States District Courts, Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, told the Senate yesterday as he reintroduced a bill to establish an office of public defender in the District Court in Washington.

At the same time he offered another bill to provide public defenders for all Federal District Courts in the United States.

"Despite the claims made by some lawyers and judges that the accused is always amply safeguarded under our law and that the conviction of an innocent person is impossible," Capper said, "the fact remains that striking instances of miscarriage of justice constantly are brought to public attention.

"Newspaper reports are continually referring to cases of innocent men who have been wrongfully convicted because of their inability to make a proper defense or to produce adequate proofs.

"The failure of the 'assigned counsel system' generally in vogue in the United States is too evident to require elaborate discussion. It is sufficient to say that this system has been a source of constant criticism and attack for many years by those coming in contact with the criminal courts. It is fundamentally wrong from nearly every standpoint."

Senator Capper said his measure has the support of the District Bar Association and labor groups and citizens' associations.

"The public defender is a step toward the democracy of justice and as such it should appeal to all fair-minded people," he concluded.

Police Expect Task Handling Troops at Play

Where to find 20,000 soldiers at play and to keep them out of trouble is a problem confronting Police Chief Ernest W. Brown and War Department officials.

Of course, the problem is not current but will be as soon as the Twenty-ninth Division mobilizes at Fort Meade, Md., they expect.

In anticipation of the task of "keeping straight" the hundreds of doughboys bound to make Washington their "fun headquarters" while on leave from the post, Maj. Brown has made a survey of "hot spots," the places dear to the heart of carefree military men.

Barrooms, dance halls, theaters and "just joints" came under the scope of Maj. Brown's survey. He said the Army officers want to provide sufficient military police to cope with the situation.

A percentage of the men are expected to "play" in Baltimore, about as far from the camp as is the District. But the authorities want to be prepared.

W. H. Blackburne Celebrates Fiftieth Year With Zoo

Fifty years ago today William H. Blackburne went out to Rock Creek Park to start developing a first-class zoo for the Nation's Capital.

Today he celebrates his golden anniversary as headkeeper of National Zoological Park which, during his incumbency, has risen from nowhere to the rank of one of the world's finest animal collections.

Probably dean of zoo men active today, Blackburne will let the anniversary come and go without any actual celebrating. However, he did give in last Wednesday night to the extent of cohosting, with Mrs. Blackburne, at a house party marking the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

Dr. William M. Mann, zoo director, was a guest at the wedding party and he'll probably be first to congratulate Blackburne today as the veteran headkeeper starts his second half-century on the job.

Before coming to Washington in 1891 to move the zoo—such as it was—from the Smithsonian grounds to Rock Creek Park, Blackburne was a lion trainer and menagerie boss for the old Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Jewish Regional Delegates to Meet Here Tomorrow

More than 200 delegates from four States and the District are expected to attend the Mid-Atlantic regional convention of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations tomorrow at the Mayflower Hotel.

TABLET UNCOVERED—Perry Huffman, steam shovel operator, examines the cornerstone tablet, built into the side of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in 1844, which he unearthed yesterday at Eleventh and H Streets Northwest. Frank Jaeger (inset), who has been a resident of Eleventh Street for more than 60 years, dropped over to watch the excavating. He was married in the church

A 76-year-old District man who emigrated here from Saxony, Germany, at the age of 19, stood by the edge of an excavation for a new building and saw the cornerstone of the long-since razed church in which he was married in 1884 brought to light by a steam shovel.

He was Frank Jaeger, owner of a small umbrella shop at 727 Eleventh Street Northwest, a resident of Eleventh Street for more than 60 years.

The cornerstone was turned up yesterday while men were digging the basement for a new building to be erected on the corner of H Street and Eleventh. It bears the inscription:

"St. Paul's Lutheran Church, City of Washington, District of Columbia, June 15th, A. D. 1844. J. P. Van Ness consecrated this site to the worship of Almighty God, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen." Following was the maker's name, "T. Berry & Co."

Underneath the stone, in a small crypt, were found a Bible, a newspaper, several coins dated 1843—one of them a 3-cent piece, church papers and the shattered remains of a glass jar in which they were stored. The jar was apparently broken when the shovel struck the foundation.

The Bible and other papers, which were soaked with water, were turned over to the National Archives for possible restoration.

Jaeger, who recalled when street cars were horse-drawn here, said that he was married in the church to the late Hannah Kude Jaeger by "a Rev. Dr. Doemer" in 1884. The church was leveled about ten years ago and a new structure has been erected at Connecticut Avenue and Everett Street Northwest.

The cornerstone has been the object of a ten-year search by church officers, who said it will be placed in the new structure.

Majority Supports Training Camp Plan For Boys and Girls in Late 'Teens

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 31.—Should training camps be provided for boys and girls in their late 'teens, for the purpose of instructing them in various skills and vocations useful in national defense?

Some such program may actually come into being if defense planners take up the recent suggestion of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. The President's wife told delegates to a convention of the newly-organized International Student Service a month ago that "every young person, boy or girl, in this Nation should give a year of service to the Nation," and added that she "would like to see us go further than voluntary work camps."

While such a program has, of course, not been widely discussed and debated by the public, the American Institute of Public Opinion has completed a survey to see what the average citizen's first reaction would be.

The results indicate that training camps for boys between the ages of 16 and 21 might have a very popular reception from the public as a whole—with certain qualifications.

In the case of training camps for girls, however, sentiment in the survey was more closely divided. And here too many voters attached qualifications to their answers.

Voters in the survey were asked:

"Do you think that boys between the ages of 16 and 21, who are out of high school, should spend one year in a training camp learning things useful to our defense program?"

A similar question was asked regarding girls 16 to 21. The results:

CAMPS FOR BOYS
Approve	79%
Disapprove	14
Don't know	7

CAMPS FOR GIRLS
Approve	56%
Disapprove	34
Don't know	10

The suggestion to organize such training camps has been attacked in some youth circles as a forerunner to "forced labor" camps on the Nazi mold. Voters in the survey sometimes qualified their support of the idea by saying, "It's all right as long as we don't copy the Nazi work camps."

Other qualifiers were:

"As long as they don't have jobs."

"As long as they are not going on to college."

"As long as they don't have parents and family to help support."

And—"Only as long as this crisis lasts."

Seven Pass D. C. Dental Board Examinations

Examinations have been passed by four applicants to practice dentistry and three dental hygienists, the Board of Dental Examiners of the District of Columbia reported yesterday.

House Votes $1,404,275,838 For Agencies

The $1,404,275,838 appropriation bill to finance "independent" Government agencies was passed yesterday by the House after defeat of an effort to slash $25,000,000 from the total.

The measure now goes to the Senate.

The House also rejected an amendment designed to revamp the present method of hiring seamen for the American Merchant Marine through union "hiring halls" and give ship captains complete freedom in the matter.

As finally approved the bill's total was $9,244,500 below the budget estimates although the inclusion of numerous defense items and a new fund of $125,000,000 for President Roosevelt's use in meeting emergencies boosted it approximately $145,000,000 above last year's appropriations for similar purposes.

Among the major items in the bill were $608,693,162 for the Veterans' Administration; $160,000,000 in cash and $180,000,000 in contract authorizations for the Maritime Commission to carry on its 50-ships-a-year construction program; $89,800,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority's dam construction program; $33,500,000 for the Selective Service system's administration, and $13,601,000 for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

A motion of Representative Taber (Republican), New York, to accomplish the $25,000,000 reduction was lost 192 to 141.

Jail's No Place for Alcoholics, Social Workers Told by One

During the last year 12,282 persons were committed to jail here for intoxication, and jail "is no place for alcoholics," the correction committee of the Council of Special Agencies was told yesterday by a serious-voiced young member of Alcoholics Anonymous.

He was the chief speaker at the committee's monthly meeting in the Y. W. C. A., but his name wasn't used, because the "anonymous" in "Alcoholics Anonymous" means what it says. Personality, the quirks of it that cause alcoholism, is the organization's workboard, he emphasized.

And those suffering alcoholism—"but only those who want to be cured of it"—can meet personalities of their kind by attending open meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous at 8 p. m. each Tuesday at 1310 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. They'll be made at home.

"Hy there rummy" is likely to be the greeting.

What occurs later was related to the corrections committee yesterday, and was received with applause.

First, the organization tells new members emphatically that its interest is entirely in alcoholics who want to be cured. It doesn't always get true answers. But the chance is taken. Then, with the newcomers at home among their kind, the organization—more subtly than through such devices as public confession—attempts to draw from the individual the obscure causes of his chronic tippling. It tries to get his attitudes reshaped again.

The speaker said exalted ego is a considerable cause of alcoholism and new members are told they are not the universe's center. Religion is not impressed, but confidence and faith in some supreme being helps toward correcting the condition, he said.

Nothing can be done for those who don't want to stop drinking and they may as well be let alone, the speaker said. The organization is one which the members should know they can never leave. "Once an alcoholic, always an alcoholic. I know I am one and that is why I don't drink," he said.

The committee, which has studied the possibilities of establishing a farm for alcoholics as one alternative to sending them to jail, said yesterday the subject would be further explored. Joseph Dayton, director of the Rehabilitation Bureau, observed that the courts have no system of sentencing alcoholics "just as there is no system of caring for them after the sentencing."

Britain Adopts Warning Signal for Fire Bombs

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Jan. 31.—Britons today were told of a new air raid warning signal for incendiary bombing.

If a succession of short blasts on a whistle is heard, the ministry of home security said, it means watch out for fire bombs and look for the chance to put them out. Heretofore, sharp blasts have been blown, which were only to reinforce the ordinary warning of air-raid sirens.

Speed The Audit

More help for the Auditor's Office is essential if the staff is to examine the records of all tax-collecting agencies in the District as ordered last October. The Commissioners have approved the addition of two temporary workers, but eligible persons on the list furnished by the Civil Service Commission have not replied to letters offering them the jobs. Possibly the Commission will be asked to supply a new list or permit the hiring of anyone available outside civil service. In any event, District officials say, the places will be filled shortly.

Meanwhile the audit, carried forward as rapidly as possible with the limited staff, is proving its value. The latest report shows that since the general study began the agency currently under examination has steadily improved its condition until discrepancies disappeared from the books entirely toward the end of November. Human nature being what it is, a little observation is a great stimulus to efficiency. The investigation also revealed the typically involved system under which collections—in this instance, of dog taxes—had to be made, with confusion attendant on the granting of immunities, hiring of part-time workers and issuing of duplicates to replace lost tags. In order that mistake-proof methods be installed to take care of similar situations—some of them more complicated and more important—it is necessary that the 50 or more agencies collecting taxes for the District be examined as soon as possible. It is not sufficient to take steps after a shortage becomes evident by accident, as in the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. There the woefully inadequate methods were not improved until too late.

A Foggy Policy

The denial of a contract for Army trucks to the Ford Motor Co. is disturbing only because it once more opens the complicated question of whether national defense contracts shall be awarded to employers who challenge the decisions of the NLRB in the courts. In this particular case denial of the contract to Mr. Ford seems to be fully justified. The War Department asked for bids on the basis of compliance with all Federal and State labor laws. Mr. Ford refused to pledge himself to abide by those statutes. So the next lowest bidder was given the contract. There seems to be a tacit admission in Mr. Ford's action that his company is not willing to comply with the law of the land. In these circumstances he certainly can't expect the Army to deal with him when the needed supplies can be obtained advantageously elsewhere.

It might seem that there has been a change of policy toward Mr. Ford. For contracts for the manufacture of airplane engines and midget scout cars had previously been negotiated with Mr. Ford. But in those cases the special adaptability of his plant to the products sought and the urgent need of turning out defense equipment with the least possible delay seem to have been the controlling factors. In awarding the contract for trucks, however, the War Department had a wider range of choice, and it could afford to ignore Mr. Ford.

Nevertheless, when full account is taken of Mr. Ford's stiff-necked attitude, the fact remains that the Administration's policy is enveloped in confusion. Last December the War Department issued an order to the effect that the National Defense Commission's statement of labor policy must be used as "the guide" in awarding defense contracts. That statement of policy calls for compliance of contractors with "Federal statutory provisions affecting labor wherever such provisions are applicable." But what is compliance with the Labor Relations Act, for example? Attorney General Jackson has ruled that the findings of the NLRB are binding upon other governmental agencies unless and until they are reversed by the courts. Does this mean that firms accepting defense contracts must promise not to appeal to the courts if the NLRB should make a ruling against them?

That difficult question seems to be left hanging in mid-air. In effect, it appears that employers are being asked to pledge conformity with a labor policy without being able to determine its full implications. That is obviously an unsatisfactory state of affairs, particularly when the Office of Production Management is trying to mobilize the full industrial strength of the country for defense purposes. It suggests that differences of opinion within the Administration are generating fog where a clear-cut policy is demanded.

Where Power Belongs

Since the world turned into a battleground, and even the laws of war came to be increasingly disregarded, our foreign relations have become, in fact, a problem in strategy. It would be a good thing to bear this change in mind in appreciating the need for the lend-lease bill. For the nonce the function of Mr. Roosevelt as Commander in Chief is more important than his function as President. This is the attitude which, except in the matter of convoys, animated the House Committee on Foreign Affairs in reporting out the lend-lease bill. There is no suggestion in the report that the President is seeking to assume extra-constitutional functions. This is in accord with the facts. Mr. Roosevelt, in the interest of national unity, is trying to carry Congress along with him in the fortification of his own prerogatives. Nor is he seeking to take away from Congress any of the legislative powers, though Representative Hamilton Fish makes an effort to establish the contrary impression in respect of "the sword and the purse."

Congress even after the lend-lease bill is passed would still retain the war-making power. To be sure, acts are contemplated in the measure which are an expression of the country's anti-Hitlerism, but these acts are merely an extension of what we are in fact doing. And not even the minority in the House committee wish entirely to cut off the aid to Britain which testifies to our anti-Hitlerism. If the minority think that the degree of our aid is related to this war or peace issue, they misjudge Hitler. Nothing that we might do will restrain Hitler from making war physically on our country when he chooses to do so, and nothing that we fail to do will make any difference to his plans. In these circumstances war as a procedural act has become outmoded. This is sensed by the people at large, if not by some of our legislators, in the overwhelming choice of the people for aid to Britain, "even at the risk of war." Congressional power likewise would still be intact in regard to the purse, though the power of the purse is not in the same twilight zone as is the warmaking power. It takes two to make a war, but it takes only one to make an appropriation. And in Congress is still vested the authority for financing the "great arsenal of democracy" which, under the measure under discussion, we shall lease to the anti-aggression powers.

Yet, though the President has respected the Legislature's powers, the House committee seems to question the President's powers. In the suggested amendments to the lend-lease measure the House committee seeks to interpret the measure as devoid of authority to use American convoys. This will continue to be a matter of interpretation. The President, it seems to us, would be perfectly free as Commander in Chief to use our naval vessels for convoying supplies to Britain without reference to any act of Congress. It is to be hoped, of course, that he will never have reason to use this power. But nobody can see into the future, and the time may conceivably come, as, for instance, in an enfilading of Britain from Irish ports, when the American people will expect the President to use this power. The American people, as the polls show, don't wish to be pusillanimous in their decision to sustain Britain. And if there's an alternative between allowing our aid-to-Britain weapons to remain in our arsenal and seeing that they arrive at their destination, we have no doubt of the course that will be taken. Americans want their weapons to be used.

"In Union There Is—"

Many Americans in this and other republics of the Western Hemisphere are watching with a good deal of interest the conference in progress at Montevideo. Five countries of South America have sent representatives to the Uruguayan capital to explore the possibilities of improving their economic relationships. More specifically, it is hoped that concerted action among Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, Bolivia and Paraguay may strengthen their economic ties in a critical period and afford special help to the latter two landlocked nations.

Argentina has asked her neighbors to study the possibilities of setting up a customs union. Most of the Latin-American states are handicapped in their attempts at industrial and commercial development by the limited markets available to them. There seems to be little probability of establishing a customs union in the near future: nevertheless, the Argentine suggestion reflects a significant trend of thought. Of more immediate importance is the Argentine proposal that tariff concessions which may be worked out at Montevideo should not be automatically extended to other countries under the most-favored-nation principle.

The United States would be disappointed by any departure from the most-favored-nation policy of international trade relations. This country found it possible to make substantial tariff concessions under the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act without giving special favors or discriminating against any nation. Certainly it will be preferable if the regional agreement under discussion at Montevideo can be kept in harmony with this sound principle.

At the same time this country has a deep interest in mutually helpful collaboration among the countries of Latin America. Should the present conference work out concessions that would be confined to the five countries represented there, it would not be the first regional agreement of this sort in the Western Hemisphere. Indeed, the special tariff arrangement between the United States and Cuba is an exception to the general principle of equal treatment for all nations with which we maintain friendly trade relations.

The fact that these countries are trying to find a basis for economic cooperation that will render them less vulnerable to any pressure from abroad seems to be more important than the form of joint action they may adopt in an emergency.

Magnesium Trust

The production and fabrication of magnesium—a metal of vital and growing importance in the manufacture of aircraft—is undoubtedly closely controlled. Only one company is engaged in the production of magnesium, and a holding company, said to be jointly owned by Alcoa and the German Dye Trust, controls the essential patents for fabrication of the metal. Now the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice has obtained indictments charging these companies and associated groups with violation of the antitrust laws through curtailment of magnesium supplies and fixing of unduly high prices. To these allegations the industry replies that its productive capacity has more than doubled since 1939 and, furthermore, will steadily increase as new plants now under construction are completed. It is also pointed out that, far from the Germans exercising any control over domestic corporations, possession of the German patents has contributed greatly to the development of the magnesium industry.

There may be some political significance attaching to the transfer of German patent rights, though it seems probable that the transaction was part of a general agreement to limit competition in world markets. The more fundamental issue raised by the Government suit is whether it is in the public interest to permit the pooling of basic patents in a manner which concentrates control of an industry in very few hands. And what matters chiefly from the standpoint of national defense is whether the domestic production of magnesium has been or will be retarded because of patent pooling and various other practices cited by the Government as evidence of illegal restraints of trade.

Youth And Fame

The conferring of two distinctions in the last few days serves to remind us that the gulf between youth and age is not so great, after all. At the same time that New York University was selecting the septuagenarian, Dr. William Lyon Phelps, as director of its Hall of Fame, the New York Young Men's Board of Trade was awarding its gold key to 29-year-old Oren Root, jr., as the city's "outstanding young man of 1940." The bestowal of palms on the young man who was largely instrumental in the nomination of Wendell Willkie is just the sort of recognition of which Dr. "Billy" Phelps would approve. In his own field he has continuously championed the cause of the new writer, and as teacher and critic he has helped innumerable persons from obscurity to the limelight. If his unfailing optimism has subjected him to some carping, it must be remembered that optimism has not always been popular. He "sold" modern literature to America at a time when it was not the academic fashion to recognize our contemporaries. A man with such liberal views of fame and on such good terms with fame is a happy choice as its arbiter.

THE THREE BROWN DOES.

Light hoof and brief
the three brown does
and where they went a shadow goes grayer than brown and not so swift yet swift enough that no one knows which was shadow and which brown does, though dust flies after in slight wind-drift.

The three brown does did not see me,
but they are mine immortally,
the sunlight on a brown-gold flank,
the tinkle of a hoof on stone,
the flash of white flags up the bank,
and then the wood and I alone.

The wood forgot one moment after,
but I recall them through my laughter and pause and listen, listen, listen . . .

The does are near,
and I'm in Charnwood once again,
my fingers red from berry-stain.
I hold my breath, the does have come,
light hoof and brief
the three brown does

Pegler On Lindbergh

It cannot be useful—can only be harmful—to have professional paid writers keep hammering away at Col. Lindbergh. More often than not I enjoy reading Mr. Westbrook Pegler's daily column. But on last Tuesday Mr. Pegler joined the "ganging-up attack" on Col. Lindbergh. And he resorted to what appears to me to be decidedly unfair tactics.

The head for his column on January 28 was, to say the least, careless. To head a column "Record of Betrayal" and then to launch an attack on Col. Lindbergh is, at the very least, carelessness. To go on, in that column, and give important significance to Col. Lindbergh's omissions of moral and spiritual things in his speeches and testimony—to state that the omissions were not accidental—all seems to suggest that the record written by that particular column is on Col. Lindbergh. I am impressed that, if Col. Lindbergh had recited The Lord's Prayer at the beginning of his speeches and testimony, the outstanding objection of Mr. Pegler would disappear.

A kindly, tolerant or sympathetic mind would naturally realize that no parents could possibly have passed through and come above the experience forced upon Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh without the help of an exceptionally deep religious understanding to comfort them and to give them the necessary courage. It is definitely not a mark of courage to inject into discussions of Col. Lindbergh's views suspicion on his lack of spiritual or moral courage. He has given real demonstration that he has both moral understanding and courage.

The Path Of The Sea

Mr. Walter Lippmann points out in his criticism of Lindbergh's "false reasoning" that not only would the Atlantic Ocean fail as a barrier to invasion, it would actually facilitate it. In his own words, "The ocean is wide but far from its being a barrier to sea power, it is the highway to sea power."

Perhaps I have been misled, but I thought all the time that, so far, those thirty miles of English Channel are about all that have been saving Britain's hide. No doubt Mr. Lippmann is right, and if the Channel were three thousand miles wide. Hitler would long since have been living in Buckingham Palace.

Of Capitalism

The naive wonder over the sudden reversal of policy on the part of the present Administration in removing the "moral embargo" on Soviet Russia at the same time that all-out aid to Britain is being urged. There is one "ism" that remains firmly entrenched and that is internationally minded capitalism. The large owners of invested capital are entirely willing to sell a bill of goods to either side of a boundary line. And when has there been a time that munitions makers have refused to sell wherever they could find a customer?

THERESA H. RUSSELL.

Production Lag

The stated object of the lend-lease bill is to promote the defense of the United States. Yet the testimony of witnesses before Congressional committees omits telling how this bill would accomplish this purpose, except for claims that it would enable our Government to aid Britain and so defend America. However, it is generally admitted that Britain's most pressing needs are for planes, tanks and other war materials.

Most vitally needed is to speed up production of war supplies. Yet the lend-lease bill says nothing about methods of stepping up defense production. Apparently it assumes that by granting extraordinary powers to the President, war production would be accelerated. But there are no grounds for such an assumption since the cold fact is that the President already has adequate powers to attain this end, if he will but use them.

Standing in the way of rapidly increasing production are: (1) divided authority in the Defense Board; (2) constant strikes sabotaging war industries; (3) lack of national unity due to distrust of Roosevelt and fear of the socializing purposes of the New Deal. President Roosevelt could remove these obstacles to industrial speed-up in short order and without enactment of the lend-lease bill, if he should so desire.

The only other essential is funds for British purchases. A simple act like the Taft-Fish bill would provide credit for Britain without all the rigamarole of the lend-lease bill. So the lend-lease bill simmers down to one thing: A scheme to give President Roosevelt dictatorial powers which are unneeded.

Granting these powers, even for six months would permit the New Deal to impose national socialism on America and make permanent a "temporary" dictatorship. This apparently is the real object of the bill. Those of us who want to give Britain adequate aid but at the same time conserve our form of Government, liberty and property, earnestly pray for the defeat of the lend-lease bill.

Righting Evil

That the Nazarene believed there was a better and more effective way to eliminate evil from the world than by physically destroying those beings possessed with evil was pretty strongly evidenced by the following rebuke, when His Apostles asked Him if they might invoke fire from heaven to consume His enemies: "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of Man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them."

And again by the following admonition: "They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.

"But go ye and learn what that meaneth. I will have mercy, and not sacrifice; for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

Operatic Accompaniment

I have read Mr. Fletcher's letter in The Post of January 26 relative to behavior at the opera. His experience is similar to that of many others, and for this reason, namely the inconsiderate silly chatter that goes on around one, spoiling the entertainment, I have given up the attendance of operas here, as well as plays. Prices I could afford were always for a balcony seat, where I was close to those who told their versions of play or musical or whatever it happened to be.

I hope Mr. Fletcher's letter starts a widespread protest against this ill-bred practice so that people who appreciate the higher and better entertainments may enjoy themselves.

When the Walter-Logan bill was pending in Congress, at the request of several members of the House I was asked to and did express my views on many of its provisions. I now desire through your paper to comment briefly on certain proposals of the Attorney General's Committee on Administrative Procedure just made public.

The committee's proposal to create in all administrative agencies a judicial unit separate and distinct from the investigative and prosecutive activities does not appear to be an innovation or a new suggestion, but on the contrary a complicated, confusing and a most expensive extension of a similar but far more practical procedure long since adopted and satisfactorily and successfully used by the Federal Trade Commission for a long period of time.

In support of this statement I refer to an article that appeared in a trade journal within the past few years and over the signature of a prominent New York lawyer. I quote the following: "The Federal Trade Commission is so organized to include a division or bureau, responsible only to the commission, separate and distinct from its division of investigation and its division charged with prosecuting the complaint. This unit, known as the trial examiners division, includes a corps of experienced lawyers, vested only with judicial functions such as the final settlement of cases by signed agreements, called stipulations, and the further and equally important judicial function of presiding at and conducting legal hearings under liberal rules of evidence, at which hearings all parties to the proceedings are afforded the right to exceptions, not only to the testimony offered but also the report upon the facts so necessary to determine a proper and final order. The procedure of this commission in the settlement of cases by agreements with respondents and through the trial of the issue, I have always found to be both liberal and fair and when equities were equal the application of both facts and the law was rightly in favor of the respondent."

The above is quoted to justify the statement that the proposals of the Attorney General's Committee is not new in administrative practice. Business has no quarrel with the procedure of the Federal Trade Commission or the administration of its acts. I believe it was excepted and properly so from the provisions of the Walter-Logan bill. The reference is intended only to support the conclusion that a procedure may be in all respects adequate in the administration of the law in one agency and will not meet the requirements of another.

What it is desired to emphasize is the impracticability of perfecting an administrative procedure that would meet the requirements of the numerous administrative agencies, owing to their varied functions, purposes and the provisions of the laws under which created. The procedure that would be adaptable for the use of the Interstate Commerce Commission would certainly serve no purpose of the National Labor Relations Board.

It is obvious for the fair administration of justice that the unit or division of an agency concerned with either the investigation or the prosecution of a complaint, should have no part whatever in the settlement of a proceedings by agreement, arbitration or order.

It is believed that the enactment of the Walter-Logan bill into law would provide a procedure necessary for the proper administration of justice in certain agencies. It is equally true that this bill should not be made applicable to certain other agencies, where the administrative procedure as herein outlined is more practical, usable and would best promote the administration of the law.

The Post Impressionist

Piety And The Pill Rock

THE NEW ORDER in our family dawned, we know not how. A bloodless revolution within our walls established the two younger children in smart modern ascendancy over us four older ones in much the same manner that a new monarch dooms his predecessor to comparative obscurity.

Father often spoke with obstinate Bourbonic pride of "the older ones," remembering our amazing docility. We had been "good," or in the provincial sense, "smart" children, each with an incredible agenda of daily chores, a respectful attitude toward "readin', writin' and 'rithmetic," and a record for Sunday school attendance, including Golden Texts and Memory Gems. We said "Yes sir" and "Yes ma'am" to father and mother, got up very early in the morning, always came to meals on time, and bowed our heads solemnly when grace was said at the table. We never asked "Why?" when we were told to do anything, and we avidly accepted the small moral-tinged rewards that were infrequently accorded to us in recognition of our goodness. We did not rebel; despite its rigid rules there was something right and solid and satisfying about that sort of family life.

Then things began to change, almost imperceptibly at first. It must have been that the Social Forces we have heard so much about in recent years had actually penetrated the deep country stronghold that was our home.

Lenna and Joe were set off from the rest of us by some years, and by many ideas; they were "Modern Youngsters." Where we older ones would have said with dignity and a touch of deference "Father is a very tall, thin man," Joe gibbed "Dad's a long, narrow man," and his eyes met Lenna's in wicked connivance. They blithely committed the unheard of breach of coming to dinner table some minutes late, casually shrugging off father's reprimands. If he became stern they resorted to whipper-snappery wisecracks and cajolery.

ONCE WHEN our father, somewhat deaf, was saying grace at the table Joe monologued to Lenna an undertone invitation, "When, if ever this prayer cometh to an end, wilt thou walketh with me in the orchard where the lambs skippeth and the sun playeth over the daisies?" Father said "Amen," and looked puzzled at our impious smiles. He was often puzzled in those times and, after mother's death, he would occasionally confide his bewilderment to us "Older Ones." We were divided almost impartially between our loyalty to him and a wistful sort of wonder at the daring youngsters. We philosophized hopefully, "Oh, it's nothing; all youngsters are like that nowadays. We'll just have to go along with them and learn to speak their language." Indeed their disarming insouciance did sometimes appear worthy of emulation, though this was a gingerly procedure with our inhibitions bristling the way they did.

The youngsters created for themselves a tight little world peopled by comic strip characters in whose outlandish doings they reveled gleefully. Different members of the family became at one time or another the helpless physical structures on which, with a surprising show of realism, they hung dubious personalities from the "funnies." Much gay banter passed between them, heightened no doubt by its comical effect on the rest of us. We older ones would enter into the mood somewhat tepidly on occasion, while father just looked puzzled and lonely. The comic strip form of levity was disturbingly alien to his experience.

FINALLY he made up his mind to explore for himself this amazing realm of modern culture. It was at once touching and ludicrous to see him turn the newspaper pages resolutely past the editorials and fix his attention on the "funnies." His manner was detached and critical. He might have been a scientist making a laboratory study of a new specimen of pathogenic bacteria. Certainly he did not identify himself or any persons living or dead with the bizarre adventures developing in daily sequence before his astonished eyes. Sometimes he would attempt to discuss them but the solemn editorial tone still clung incongruously to his remarks. "How," he asked rhetorically, "is a lad ever to acquire habits of thrift if he eats his hamburgers today and defers payment until Tuesday? Is there not a dangerous element of domestic disorganization in the fact of a man having to evade his parvenu wife and stealthily satisfy his appetite for corned beef and cabbage in a frowzy restaurant?"

It was on the occasion of our last family reunion at the old home place that Lenna and Joe, after casual reminiscences here and there about the house, strolled away arm in arm toward the edge of the clearing out by the road. I found them some time later perched upon the huge rock near the R. F. D. mail box. As I came up Joe intoned with droll solemnity, "Beloved sister, approach not but leave to us these precious moments together. Go, and desecrate not with your alien presence this shrine to our dissolute youth, this Pill Rock." His elaborate abracadabra held me, as he no doubt intended it should, gaping and mutely pleading for enlightenment. Together they told me the story of how in early childhood the little white pills, father's invariable remedy for any and all ailments, when placed in their hands to be unquestionably swallowed, had instead been buried in the shadow of the rock—their Pill Rock. Their eyes, involuntarily excluding me, met in the gay triumph of their youthful disobedience. A vague, regretful sadness came over me, in the poignant realization that I had no Pill Rock to lighten the memories of childhood; I had always swallowed my pills.

Today And Tomorrow

The Opposition To The Lease-Lend Bill

ON THE ONE HAND there are those who will examine the lease-lend bill anxiously to determine how its powers can be set up and used effectively to improve our own defense by support of the British. They will be concerned with the efficient administration of the measure, with clarifying provisions and a working agreement under which the President and Congress will consult and cooperate so that action under the bill shall have behind it a united country. For they will insist that the real risk in this bill is that delay, indecision and disunity will impair its effectiveness, and thus allow an emergency to develop in which only much more dangerous and costly measures will be effective.

But there are others, and they are the articulate critics of the bill, who are not worrying at all whether the bill is adequate or how it can be made so adequate that we shall not have to take much graver decisions a few months hence. Their worry is not whether the bill gives enough power to America to aid Britain by measures short of war but whether it gives too much power to the President of the United States. Their idea of improving the bill is not to add to the power of the United States Government in this historic emergency but to diminish the power of the President. For they assume that Mr. Roosevelt wishes to enter the war and to make himself "a dictator" over American industry, and that insofar as they can reduce his authority under this bill, by that much they are preventing war abroad and dictatorship at home.

WITH ALL DUE respect to those who take this view of the President's purposes and of the meaning of the bill, it must be said, and can be proved, that they are mistaken. They are looking at the powers granted in this bill without remembering or realizing the powers which—under the Constitution and under the defense acts—the President already possesses. Having failed to measure the power which the President already has, they do not see that if the President had wanted to engage in hostilities or to dictate to industry, he would not need this bill. For, as the conductor of foreign relations, as Commander in Chief, and as Chief Executive of the huge defense authorizations and appropriations, he already has all the power he could need to engage in hostilities or to regiment industry.

This bill does indeed add to the power of the President. But it adds nothing to the power he already has to engage in war if that were his purpose. It adds nothing to his power to control industry if that were his purpose. Since he can already do the things which the opponents of the bill fear, but has not done them, there is the strongest presumption that the purpose of the bill is in all sincerity and truth what it professes: to enable the President to defend the United States by measures short of war. For if, as is certain, the President under his Constitutional powers could precipitate war, there is every reason to believe that the true purpose of these new powers is not war but a more efficient use of our resources and our influence to achieve defense without war.

WHEN THE OPPOSITION paint a picture of a President bent on war and restrained only by a peace-loving minority in Congress, they are misleading themselves and the country. A study of the history of our wars will be an eye-opener to those who imagine today that the Congressional power to declare war has ever meant that hostilities cannot begin until Congress has voted for war. Most of the hostilities in which the United States has engaged have begun before there was a declaration of war. I think, though I am not entirely sure of it, that Jefferson sent warships into the Mediterranean against the Barbary States without prior authorization by Congress. It is certainly the fact that President Polk ordered the Army to fight the battles of Palo Alta and of Resaca de la Palma before the passage of an Act of Congress which recognized "a state of war existing" between Mexico and the United States.

It is certainly the fact that President Lincoln proclaimed the blockade of the Confederacy some months before, as the Supreme Court put it in the Prize Cases, Congress "baptized it with a name." President Wilson twice invaded Mexico—once by land and once from the sea—without a declaration of war, and many other Presidents have without express Congressional authority used the Navy and the Marines in the Far East and elsewhere for warlike acts.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL authority of the President in regard to war and peace is inherently so great, for all practical purposes so complete, that no power which is asked in the lease-lend bill or may be denied him can make any substantial difference. The President can break off diplomatic relations. He can send the fleet where he chooses. He can make demands, deliver ultimata, and do all manner of warlike acts. What restrains him is not the lack of powers in the lease-lend bill but his own conscience, his sense of duty, his responsible judgment. No useful purpose is served, therefore, by pretending that the debate over this bill reflects a conflict in which a President, otherwise unable to go to war but desiring to do so, is restrained by Mr. Fish and Mr. Wheeler and their associates.

The truth is that the President must be trying to avoid war or he would long since have used his immense powers to precipitate war. When a man already possesses the power to raise irreconcilable issues and commit the country irrevocably and to engage in actual hostilities, he does not need to ask for the powers of the lease-lend bill if his purpose is to precipitate war. Since he needs no new powers merely to get into the war, the President is entitled to be believed when he says that the new powers will strengthen him in avoiding war. And if he is entitled to be believed, then the proper attitude towards the bill is one of concern for its efficiency, not worry over whether it adds another pail of water to the already overflowing reservoir of the President's powers.

THE SAME FAILURE to appreciate the situation which already exists is to be found in those who, like Mr. Mark Sullivan, are worried lest this bill augment the President's discretionary power over American industry. Mr. Sullivan is so worried about this that he thinks Congress should give or lend Britain a lump sum of cash: "with this money Britain would buy such supplies as she needs, make such use of them as she deems best. All the discretion would be in Britain, all the responsibility on Britain. There would be no continuing responsibility on us—our responsibilities would end with the making of the loan" whereas under the lease-lend bill "daily and hourly the President will exercise the discretion given him by the bill."

In his anxiety to reduce the President's powers, Mr. Sullivan appears for the moment to have forgotten the American defense program and the grim fact that American industry is not yet able to supply Britain and America with "such supplies" as they need. Yet as any observer of the defense program knows, the real problem is how to satsify British and American needs out of the production of an insufficient armament industry: the solution of this problem requires the detailed coordination of British and American specifications and contracts, and the continual determination of priorities as between Britain and the United States, as between the Army and the Navy. It is simply fantastic to suppose that Congress can give Britain a lump sum to be spent without "daily and hourly" discretion by the American Government as to how it is to be spent. Whether British purchases are paid for with British cash or American cash does not in the slightest degree affect the fundamental question, or make it possible in the slightest degree to avoid the responsibility—ultimately the President's—of allocating the products of American industry.

LIPPMANN: "... the structure of opposition ... is contrary to fact and irrelevant and a waste of good energy and precious time"

THE LEASE-LEND bill does not add to the President's responsibility for industrial production. He already has it. It does not add to his need to exercise discretion. Unavoidably he must exercise it. What it does do is to fix the responsibility and to make his discretion more efficient in that the whole British-American armament program becomes one coordinated project.

But if the President did not have this power, he would still have authority and money to command the whole munitions output of American industry. It does not, therefore, magnify his authority over production to give him greater authority in distributing the product. If he did not have authority to allocate products to Britain, he would still have authority to place orders and get delivery from every plant in the United States. Nothing Mr. Sullivan can do about the lease-lend bill will diminish this authority, this "dictatorial" authority if we must use big words inaccurately. The authority which Mr. Sullivan fears is already ample, even super-abundant, by previous acts of Congress.

WE MAY CONCLUDE, therefore, that the structure of opposition,—reared on the assumption that this bill gives the President new power for war and dictatorship,—is contrary to fact and irrelevant and a waste of good energy and precious time.

Ship Deal Is Denied

Roosevelt Disclaimer

Published reports that the United States Government anticipates trading 20 Navy destroyers for the British battleship King George V were denied today by President Roosevelt, Secretaries Hull and Knox and Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations.

The President said he understood the story had been invented by a Detroit newsman, Secretary Knox denied it as a "cockeyed invention without a word of truth." Secretary Hull remarked he had never heard the matter discussed, and Admiral Stark said he had not heard such an arrangement talked of in Navy circles.

Despite these denials of a report on a specific trade, talk which has been heard for days continued in diplomatic and political quarters, as well as other circles which would be more intimately connected with any deal, that there might eventually be a trade of five new British battleships for a number of American cruisers and destroyers.

U. S. Needs Battleships

It has been impossible to obtain substantiation of this talk from any high official sources, but it is no secret that the United States will be shorter of battleships than any other class of vessels for some time to come. Some observers foresee that this shortage might be acutely felt in case of trouble in the Far East.

The fleet is held by some of the Navy's own leading experts to be better supplied at present with cruisers than any other type of fighting ships. Seventeen new cruisers are scheduled for delivery in 1942 and these could more than supplant any cruisers that were disposed of at this time.

On the other hand, most experts on active duty here deolare that Britain has far more use for light fast ships like cruisers in her present situation than for slower and heavier battleships. It has been tacitly understood here that, for its own reasons, the United States was holding the Japanese fleet with its heavy battleships in check while the British armada has been battling in Europe and the Mediterranean against German and Italian submarines, planes and speedy torpedo boats.

Light Cruisers Mentioned

The cost to Britain of its five newest battleships, the King George V, Jellicoe, Beatty, Duke of York, and Prince of Wales, is estimated at $28,000,000 each, or $140,000,000 for all. The ten American light cruisers which might be deemed available for transfer had an original cost of $10,000,000 each or a total of $100,000,000. Over-age destroyers available cost about $1,500,000 when new, but being over 20 years of age, probably are worth less than half the cost price. The British have been reported as seeking 60 more such ships but this has been denied.

The only cruisers that could be possibly considered in any transfer are of the light Omaha class, all commissioned from 1921 to 1924 and in good condition and active operation. Besides the Omaha they are the Raleigh, Concord, Memphis, Marblehead, Milwaukee, Detroit, Trenton, Richmond and Cincinnati.

The British battleships of the King George V class are of the same tonnage as the American warships of the North Carolina class under construction, or 35,000 tons each.

Hitler Sends Duce A 'Thank You' Note

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Rome radio tonight broadcast the following text of a message from Adolf Hitler to Benito Mussolini:

"I thank you, Duce, for your friendly message on the occasion of the anniversary of German rebirth (Thursday's eighth anniversary of the coming to power of the Nazis in Germany). On the side of the friendly and allied Italian people, Nazi Germany continues to fight with firm decision and certainty of final victory for the new Europe. With comradeship and solidarity,

No Compromise With Hitler Possible

London.

IT IS DIFFICULT for an Englishman to avoid a deep sense of gratitude as he reads the testimony of American Cabinet officers before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the "Aid to Britain" bill. Here, one feels, is an issue, as an overwhelming majority of my countrymen see it, set clearly and incisively before a Congress refreshed by the immediacy of its contact with public opinion.

It is, I think, right that the people of the United States should be told by the men who have all the information before them that the next months, on any showing, will be months of grave danger to the democratic cause. It is right, too, that full emphasis should be given to the fact that without swift material aid from the "arsenal of democracy," the power of Great Britain to meet the scale of attack it will encounter must be gravely jeopardized. And it is, too, right that the leaders of American democracy should say to their own people that were we to go down, the assault of the dictators against America would see a rapid, inexorable consequence.

LASKI: "If we lose, it is the turn of America and the Soviet Union. I do not think we will lose"

It will soon be nearly two years since fortune enabled me to visit the United States, so that I know the present alertness of its public opinion only at second hand. But as I read it, I cannot help realizing how much there is about the attitude which distinguished our own public opinion until the invasion of the Low Countries. On the right there is a sense of the immensity of American power and the conviction that a dictatorship would not risk attack upon it, the conviction that America would not be beaten, and the half-conscious desire somehow to preserve the status quo by coming to an understanding with Hitler. On the left there is the massive confusion which comes from the fact that though all the strands of opinion have the realization what fascism is, each strand has a separate nostrum to cherish and would risk the victory of fascism rather than acquiesce in surrender of its one particular nostrum.

TO ONE GROUP, the Roosevelt program is illegitimate unless the Soviet Union supports it. To another, it is wrong because a British victory may mean consolidation of British imperialism. To another, it will not do because it deflects attention away from the burning evils in the social and economic landscape of America. To another still, it must be opposed because it leads to a Presidential dictatorship. And there is the still, small voice of the pacifist whom even the Nazis' behavior in Poland and the other occupied countries has not converted from the doctrine that evil must not be resisted with force.

I know well enough all that the left in Britain risks in standing squarely by Mr. Churchill in this war. The answer simply is, that refusal to do so means there would rapidly be defeat; and defeat means—look at the occupied countries—that the left is annihilated by Gestapo methods. No serious-minded person thinks that the left has any chance in France until the shadow of military defeat begins to encompass Hitler and his satellites. No serious-minded person, either, can believe that a victorious Britain, maimed and scarred by this war, is then going to bend its energies to forming a coalition to overthrow the Soviet Union. To us of the Labor Party, the battle in which we are engaged is simply and literally a battle for the preservation of opportunities through which, if preserved, we believe we will be able to proceed to the reconstruction of our economic and social life. But without the preservation of those opportunities we know that the things our movement has been striving for these hundred years past will cease to have meaning in the thoughts and hopes of men.

AND WHAT IS TRUE of ourselves is true of America, even if at one remove. Hitler will not rest content with domination of Europe. None knows better than the men in the Kremlin that the destruction of bolshevism is only, for him, a postponed aim; the survival of the Russian experiment depends quite literally on a British victory. It may well be that were Britain to be defeated, there would be a pause for consolidation before he came to grips with America. But it could not be a long pause; for the whole essence of his strategy must be a surprise attack before America is adequately prepared to resist it. In that vital sense I think, and I am proud to think, that our claim, that in defending ourselves we are defending America, is a just claim; and I think, therefore, that the aid we receive from America is fundamentally a part of the defense of America. For the highest hopes of America promise to be meaningless so long as Hitler and his satellites can threaten the security of the world.

It is, indeed, an urgent thing for all the friends of democratic freedom to realize that security from Hitlerism is an essential preamble to the achievement of their objective. It was, I think, John Dewey who said, "It is the business of an ideal to take might unto itself in order that it may cease to be merely an ideal." That is our business now; compared to it every other objective is of less importance for the moment. Not until we begin to see that our way to victory is clear can we begin to remember our differences; for the present it is our identities that matter. One day, no doubt, the Labor Party will have to seek the defeat of its present associates. But until the present danger has passed, Mr. Churchill and Mr. Attlee have that supreme end in common on which all other ends depend.

Not to understand this is to show a lack of proportion in the estimation of values which destroys utterly any title to statesmanship. To learn to put first the things that are first is the beginning of democratic wisdom; and the first thing, surely, is to recognize what the whole left, at least, understood before 1939, that between Hitler and every form of free government there is no possibility of compromise.

It is because President Roosevelt has so long recognized this that to us in Britain his speeches, hardly less than his actions, are encouragement beyond measure. I think that most of us understand that the second Battle of Britain which will be fought over the next six months is the turning point in the history of the world. If we win it, Hitler has shot his bolt and we will go forward. I believe go straight forward, rapidly to victory. If we lose, it is the turn of America and the Soviet Union. I do not think we will lose.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Idealistic?

IT CERTAINLY would be a great favor to many of us if someone would explain patiently in plain, little words to what extent we are being idealistic and moral in this war and to what extent practical or, if not practical, then selfish. Because, if we are strictly idealistic and moral, how do we distinguish between Hitlerism and Stalinism, which, as so many have observed, are equally offensive to American ideals and morals and both guilty of wanton aggression, although in the latter respect there has been a difference of degree? That is to say, Hitler is no worse aggressor than Stalin but is, in fact, from the standpoint of efficiency, a better one.

Both are extremely unkind to elements of their home folk, but Stalin has vastly outscored Hitler in slaughter within the national family circle. But, however the cries of the victims pain us, we have no right to interfere by force—anyway, on that ground.

IF WE WERE to take that attitude we should be forever rushing into other people's houses and yelling "unhand that woman!" If that were our position we should have taken firm steps against Turkey a long time ago for the terrible thinks the Turks did to the Armenians, and we never should have recognized Soviet Russia.

However, I think we can take it as settled that it is not our intention to reprove by force of arms the rulers of other nations who hold massacres or otherwise persecute elements of their people, much as we deplore this conduct.

Now, if Russia today were to throw in on the Allied side—meaning our side—we would give numerous rousing cheers and our best people would start inviting the Soviet Ambassador, Constantine Oumansky, to parties at their homes. We are prepared to admire and root for the once unspeakable Turk as well, although Turkey, of course, is a dictatorship, too. So it comes around that we are willing to help one of the worst aggressors and one of the most fiendish tyrants in all history to lick the other, after which the tyrant of the first part—meaning Stalin — would be stronger and meaner than ever.

That wouldn't be spreading freedom in the world.

THEN—about England. For the first time in the adult life of this country we are beginning to realize what tough, game people the English are—and I mean the English, specifically, and not the Scots, Irish and Welsh along with them, although their courage is not questioned.

It just happens that in this fight the blow has fallen on the English almost exclusively and that they have stood up under their punishment as no other people ever did or had to in the history of the world. Even the Germans must admire them for their sustained bravery, and, win or lose this war, the English are going to be respected afterward and have some say in the running of it.

But even admiring the English—and all the British, for that matter—Americans can't tell themselves that we must help Britain only because we think Britain is defending freedom as such. If Germany didn't threaten our position as a big nation we wouldn't be taking all these exercises to develop our chest measurements and making all these speeches to ourselves.

OUR GOVERNMENT and most of our people are convinced now that the Germans are this country's enemies, too, or, at least, that they are very tricky, unreliable neighbors who really have set themselves the task of bossing the whole world. But there our own freedom and our existence as a big nation are threatened. As to the freedom, I think we will lose some in the struggle and, even if victorious, never will get it all back. And even if the slave states should wiggle loose if Hitler were demolished that is no promise that they would be free.

So it appears that in fighting for their own safety the British, incidentally, are defending ours, too, but I don't think they ever would fight for ours unless their own safety and freedom were involved or that we would make all this effort unless we felt that ours were threatened.

If it is freedom, as an ideal, everywhere that we are so wrought up about, why didn't we tie into the Russians a year ago?

Lend-Lease Status

By Mark Sullivan

U. S. Attitude Made Plain To Nazis

THE STATUS of the lease-lend bill, and its future course, can be outlined thus:

(1) The bill has been given consideration by the House Committee on Foreign Affairs. The House committee's hearings, now completed, were reasonably thorough, with ample opportunity and courteous hearing for witnesses having every shade of belief.

(2) The House committee, taking account of points made in the hearings, has made changes in the bill. All the changes are in the direction of limiting the power which the bill confers on the President.

(3) The bill, as changed by the House committee, will be introduced in the full House the coming week. There will be two or three or more days of debate. Further amendments and alternatives to the bill will be put forward. The bill may or may not be amended in the House. Final action by the House may be expected by the end of the coming week.

(4) MEANWHILE, THE SENATE is under way. The Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate has begun its hearings. These hearings will probably consume considerable time. One expected witness, Wendell Willkie, will not return from England to the United States until about February 10. As public interest in the bill grows, the Senate hearings will probably be prolonged.

(5) After the Senate committee completes its hearings, it will write its version of the bill. Probably this Senate committee version will differ materially from the present House committee version.

(6) After the Senate committee

SULLIVAN: "... Britain is already getting as much war material from the United States as her own industries can now produce ..." writes its version, that version will be introduced in the full Senate. Thereafter will ensue debate and proposals of amendments. The Senate debate will be much longer than the debate in the House, for the Senate rule, different from the House, puts no limit on debate (except under extraordinary conditions and very rarely). It may be well into March before the Senate acts finally on its version of the bill.

(7) The Senate, after passing its version of the bill, will name a conference committee. There will be a similar conference committee from the House. The two conference committees will meet to adjust differences in the two versions of the bill. After the two conference committees agree upon a joint version of the bill, this version will go to the Senate and House for final action by those bodies.

UNDERLYING all this process is one fixed condition. The broad purpose of the bill is agreed to, almost universally. The broad purpose is, help to Britain. That we shall help Britain, that we shall put our industrial resources behind her, is assented to by an overwhelming majority of Congress, an overwhelming majority of American opinion. All the discussion and debate is about the form in which the help shall be given.

This plainly existing fact, that Britain is going to be helped, answers a question sometimes raised, a question about time. It is said that Britain needs help quickly, and that therefore there should be haste in passing the bill. To this, the answer is that Britain is already getting as much war material from the United States as her industries can now produce (subject to keeping an adequate amount for our own armed forces).

Britain is getting all the material we can give her, as she has been getting it for 18 months past, by paying cash, or by giving something in exchange, as she got the 50 destroyers. The present proposal would enable her to get the material on credit. To the extent that Britain would be relieved from paying cash, there is a certain importance in early passage of the proposed measure. This importance is real and should not be overlooked. But, as respects getting war material to Britain, the real need for haste lies not in the passage of the proposed measure but in speeding up our industrial output. This speeding up is going on as rapidly as we are able to manage, and will continue to go on regardless of the time consumed in passing the proposed measure.

MOREOVER, Britain has already had one immense advantage through the mere bringing forward of this measure. Britain already has the psychological help of knowing that the industrial output of the United States is going to be available to her, and without need of her paying cash.

The psychological factor is even more important in its effect upon Germany. Every agent Hitler has in America, every expert who follows the American press for him, and the actions of our Congress, must have already told him that Britain is going to be able to get practically unlimited war supplies from the United States.

Meanwhile, here in America, with the decision to help Britain fully made, we need a certain amount of time, to make sure that the help be given in a way which at once is of the greatest possible advantage to Britain, but at the same time does not unnecessarily threaten to warp our pattern of government by excessive transfer of powers from Congress to the Executive.

30,000 Expected to Participate in Week-Long National Christian Mission Sessions

300 Meetings Will Be Held In D. C., Area

By Robert Tate Allan.

Its Christianity-rekindling flame fanned by success in other cities, the National Christian Mission swings into the Nation's Capital tomorrow for its eight-day crusade. Thirty thousand persons are expected to participate in the sessions.

"Captained" by the dynamic Dr. E. Stanley Jones, who will address one of the opening mass meetings, the "team" of 30 religious leaders during the week will address or conduct 300 meetings and seminars throughout Washington and vicinity.

They will appear with local leaders, including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, at seminars, women's meetings, youth assemblies, high schools, colleges, universities, service clubs, ministers' meetings, before the radio "mike," and other places.

To Visit Prisons

They will visit prisons, shops, factories, stores, labor groups, business, professional and governmental organizations.

More than 6,000 men, women and children from about 150 local and nearby churches are expected to attend the initial mass meetings tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. in Continental and Constitution Halls.

Dr. Jones, the Clarkesville, Md., boy who made good as the famous missionary to India, will address the latter gathering at 8:30 p. m. and Dr. Paul E. Scherer, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity, New York City, and noted radio pulpit orator, the former. Their respective subjects will be "Is the Kingdom of God Realism?" and "The Church of the Living God."

Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor of National City Christian Church and local mission general chairman, will preside at the Constitution Hall assembly. It will be preceded at 7:30 p. m. by an organ recital by Thomas Moss, organist of Calvary Baptist Church, and the rendition of Christiansen's "Beautiful Saviour" by the combined choirs of Calvary and First Baptist and New York Avenue Presbyterian Churches. Charles Dana Beaschler will direct.

Dr. Rustin to Preside

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church and mission committee chairman, will preside at the Continental Hall program. Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" will be sung by the united choirs of Mount Vernon Place Methodist and Foundry Methodist Churches, directed by Dean Shure. Church choirs also will present special programs at the area meetings during the week.

Suburban churches, too, will have a large share in the National Christian Mission (see separate story in suburban issue). Methodist Bishop Paul B. Kern, of Nashville, Tenn., will address a mass meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Central Methodist Church, Ballston, Va., and Philip Lee, Chicago Chinese orator-singer, a mass gathering at the same hour in the Rockville High School gymnasium.

Many Protestant churches of this area will dispense with evening services tomorrow night to participate in the mass programs. Many will attend in bodies. Some churches will relinquish all weekday activities to take part in the daily programs.

Mission Program Begun in '36

The National Christian Mission is part of a five-year mission program launched in 1936 by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. It is directed by Jesse M. Bader, council general secretary, and will be concluded at Easter, April 13.

The National Preaching Mission from 1936 to 1938 drew 2,000,000 people in 41 cities, including Washington. Thirty-five thousand ministers were contacted.

In the University Christian Mission that followed in 1938 and 1939, speakers visited 46 institutions, two-two-thirds of them land-grant schools, colleges and universities. A week was spent on each campus.

The National Christian Mission was begun last September in Kansas City, and since then has visited 14 major metropolitan areas, including Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore. The Pittsburgh Mission ends tomorrow with giant mass meetings in the afternoon. It moves to St. Louis for the week of February 9-16.

The local mission is being held with the cooperation of the Washington Federation of Churches and the Federal Council. A home visitation evangelism program, directed by Guy H. Black, of the Federal Council, will follow the local mission.

Religious Liberty Props Democracy, Group Is Told

The survival of political democracy in America depends upon the existence of religious liberty, Francis Burke declared at the recent "Ministers' Night" dinner-meeting of the Washington Church Press Association at the Continental Hotel.

"I know that those forces which are seeking to destroy our cherished American institutions know that they must first destroy religious liberty," said the volunteer worker in the National Conference of Christians and Jews. In private life he is connected with the Railroad Retirement Board.

The church publicity workers of many denominations and their pastors saw ribbons in the recent church publication contest awarded to the following:

Congregational publications, first prize, Mount Rainier Christian Church; second, Sodality of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Brookland; church bulletins, first place, Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church; second, Douglas Memorial Methodist Church.

William S. Egbert, chief scribe of the association, accepted the Mount Rainier prize. He is editor of Everyman, the publication of the Everyman's Bible Class. He presided at the dinner.

"BLEST BE THE TIE THAT BINDS"
— — — DR. JOHN FAWCETT — — —

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

Dr Fawcett, ministering in a small Yorkshire village for equally small stipend, had accepted the call of a prominent London church. But the tearful entreaties of his devoted parishioners prevailed upon him to remain. He could never sever the tie that bound them. Soon after, he wrote the beloved BLEST BE THE TIE THAT BINDS.

Play Best Points In Dress, Advises Alice Marble

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

"Feature what you have in face and in figure—unless you have everything!"

That is the clothes philosophy of Alice Marble, tennis star who for the last two years has been voted the best dressed sports woman in America. She was here yesterday to play an exhibition match at the University of Maryland with Mary Hardwicke, ranging English tennis star.

"No woman should stray too far from the beaten path in clothes," said Miss Marble, "but she can still be individual while conservative." This tennis star, who designs sports clothes as a sideline, believes that every woman has some good feature—face, hair, throat, shoulders, a small waist or slender hips—that she should emphasize. If her legs are her best asset she should wear her dresses short. Or if, like Miss Marble, she has a tiny waist, she can play up to her midriff.

For formal wear, especially, Miss Marble takes advantage of her small waist. Traveling light, she has just two formals with her at present. One, a shirtwaist dress in bright red lightweight jersey, has a brighter red belt that calls attention to her waist and still makes it look small. Another, of purple lace, is lined, except at the midriff, where the flesh tint shows through.

Wearing Clothes an Art

Miss Marble's second point in clothes philosophy is—make the best of the clothes you have. "It's important to know how to put clothes on," she stressed, "even though some women look well in a sack." For example, she said her friend Carole Lombard could wear anything and always look well dressed. "She knows how to put clothes on," added Miss Marble. "It's not so much what you pay for clothes as how much time you take in putting them on." Miss Marble thinks that even though modern women are rushed, they should take time to put their hats on at different angles or to have the lines of their dress changed a bit.

Miss Marble is an authority on the tennis clothes she designs for leading firms throughout the country. "There isn't much leeway for the tennis outfit, so we are rather limited," she explained. She considers dead white the only good form for the tennis court. Not even at a country club does she think color is in order. She doesn't mean, however, that there can't be a bit of color in a belt or an ankle sock.

Prefers to Wear Shorts

Although she prefers tennis shorts when she plays, Miss Marble also designs dresses with short skirts for the occasion. "Shorts are especially comfortable and cool," she said, "and on windy days they don't annoy me by blowing against the legs."

Miss Marble has noticed a great improvement in tennis clothes within the last few years. "There are no more 'droopy drawers' in playsuits anymore," she said. "They look like skirts, though they actually have a divide between. But there is no more extra material noticeable when one bends over."

Since she doesn't sketch, Miss Marble's procedure in designing clothes is different from that of the average designer. Those who wear her designs are sure of having tennis clothes that have stood the acid test.

She takes a sketch artist along with her to the courts. There she makes suggestions for different changes in the outfits as she sees the player in action—a slit here, a seam there or an extra pocket. Then she suggests new materials, too.

These outfits are then made up according to the suggestions she has given. But here is the real difference—Miss Marble actually tries these outfits out on the court—testing them for practicality and serviceability. They are also tested for durability and washable qualities before they are actually handed down to the novice or the professional for wear on the courts.

FOR THE STREET—Miss Alice Marble, best-dressed woman of the sports world, is shown above in a typically American street costume. She wears a leopard sports type coat with a tiny pompadour hat of combination leopard and fabric. The fabric of the hat matches her green wool spectator sports dress. On the lapel of her dress she wears a pin depicting a little tennis figure all ready for the swing

FOR TENNIS—On the courts Miss Marble always wears an all-white costume which she considers to be the only "accepted" form of dress for all tennis players—although she doesn't frown on a tiny touch of color in spots. Above, she wears a simple pique dress, comfortably short—one of her own design available in a local store. She applauds the short skirt, but prefers shorts when she wields her own racquet

Meals May Maintain Health And Also Be Economical

By Ida Jean Kain

IT IS UP to the housewife to plan menus that will maintain—even improve—the health of her family. And the more budget-minded she is, the more carefully she plans, for it's thrifty to be healthy!

If you are really trying to give your family meals that are low in cost but high in the protective foods, you will always keep in mind this list: Milk, eggs, dark breads and cereals, vegetables and fruits. These foods are the richest sources of the so-called protective elements—vitamins, minerals and protein.

Milk makes such a generous contribution to nutritional needs that it is actually one of the cheapest foods on the market. To supply the essentials for normal growth and health, the family dietary should include daily: One quart of milk for each child throughout the second year; one and one-half pints for each child over that age, and one pint for each adult.

Use Evaporated Milk

To cut down the milk bill, evaporated milk may be used for part of the daily ration. It has the same food value as fresh milk and is much less expensive. The daily menus should contain potatoes and one or more other vegetables. In the low-cost menus, vegetables should not be allowed to average more than 5 cents per pound. If the fresh vegetables are too expensive, canned vegetables may be substituted. The water in which they have been canned should always be utilized, for it contains a high percentage of the vitamins and minerals.

In buying fresh vegetables, insist on the young, green leaves and tender roots; they are higher in the essential elements than the old, wilted leaves and roots. Since part of the vitamin value may be lost when vegetables are stored too long, it doesn't pay to "stock up" on these perishables. And, while we're on the subject, make use of the green outer leaves of lettuce and cabbage—they're richer in vitamins than the white inner leaves.

Some fresh fruit should be included daily in the menus, with preference given citrus fruits three or four times during the week. Tomatoes may be used instead, however, and it doesn't matter whether they are canned or fresh.

Choose Dark Variety

For maximum protective elements, choose the whole grain breads and cereals—the dark variety.

Eggs are an important part of the diet and three or four per week should be allowed each child and adult. When meat and fish are expensive, they may be restricted to three or four times a week, and cheese or legumes—dried beans, peas and lentils—used on the other days.

Each person needs an average of one-half pound of fat (which may be butter or oleomargarine reinforced with vitamin A) and one-half pound of sugar each week. As additional protection, one teaspoon of cod liver oil or other fish oil daily is suggested.

Old-Fashioned Buckwheat Cakes Cold Weather Treat

FRIDAY morning is one time that it does not take any special effort for me to get up. This is the day each week I go to Ceres Restaurant in the winter months for the Friday breakfast special—old-fashioned buckwheat cakes as made by Joe. He has the same idea as myself, that buckwheat cakes must be raised with yeast to be authentic. This old-fashioned version is always better after the first morning, as the "seed" seems to ripen them better than the yeast used at first. They are simple to make although some persons have the mistaken idea that they are complicated to make. Here is the way Joe makes them:

Buckwheat Cakes

At night mix together, and let dissolve, 1 pint hot water, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ ounce yeast, 3 tablespoons sugar. Then add 3½ cups buckwheat flour. In the morning add 6 tablespoons melted butter, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 pint milk and ½ teaspoon baking powder. Bake on hot griddle.

This may be a different way of making buckwheat cakes than many persons use but it is the recipe that produces delightful cakes. Also, there are many variations for making buckwheat cakes. Cornmeal may be used as part of the flour, and should be scalded or made into mush. Do not use more than ½ cup and add the other flour slowly, not to get the batter too thick. Some persons also prefer to use molasses instead of sugar.

Readers Challenge Efficacy of Psychiatry In Correcting Housewife's 'Melancholia And Extreme Nervousness;' Internist Quoted

FOUR DAYS AGO THIS COLUMN discussed the problem of "Emily Anne," a housewife, 24, who complains of "recent spells of deep melancholia and extreme nervousness"—during which she lashes out in uncontrollable, unprovoked rage at her "perfect husband and two adorable babies." Her theory that she needs psychiatric help was given unqualified indorsement, and she was told where to apply for such treatment. This advice is vigorously challenged by readers, however,—who recommend other remedies, each in terms of his own experience with similar distress. Following are representative letters,—plus my own report of an internist's attitude toward the case. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am so much interested in the problem of "Emily Anne," discussed in Wednesday's column, that I must speak my little piece. Not very long after marriage, I suffered the same obscure distress as "Emily Anne." I was working very hard, as no doubt she is. A medical doctor, on the strength of a blood count, diagnosed anemia and began a dosage of iron and thyroid extract.

The change in my disposition was so marked that it was commented on by persons who were unaware that I was under treatment. However, as time went on, I developed a constant "pressure hadache," and while no longer irritable, I was very unhappy and began to wonder how I could endure life in such circumstances.

It was only after several months of irregular progress that my doctor,—by no means an "old fogey" or an indifferent worker,—recommended a basal metabolism test, which resulted in "stepping up" the dosages of thyroid extract and complete relief from headaches. I wonder, therefore, if "Emily Anne" has had a complete medical examination, including a basal metabolism test given by someone who knows about endocrine malfunctioning? From my own experience, and that of friends, I think there is at least a 50-50 chance that this is exactly what she needs. Sincerely yours,

LORA M.

She Thinks Housewife Is Vitamin-Starved

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was shocked to read, in Wednesday's column, your advice to "Emily Anne" to seek psychiatric help in correcting her extreme irritability, when it is perfectly plain to me that this young woman is vitamin-starved. Lack of vitamin B results in just such symptoms—to the point, even, of seeming mental instability. Let her read in the December, 1940, issue of Readers' Digest (page 11) Dr. Paul de Kruif's article, entitled "Famine Fighters."

Vitamin therapy is the key to future hope for suffering humanity, and we have the research chemists to thank for this blessing. Literally dozens of my friends have been restored to vital health as a result of becoming "vitamin-conscious." Surely you will not fail to call this urgent indorsement of vitamin therapy to "Emily Anne's" attention. Sincerely yours. L. E. K.

Hormone Injections Restored Her Poise

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I feel that perhaps I can give "Emily Anne" advice that would help her. Six years ago, when I was just 24, I began having symptoms, much like hers, of extreme irritability. I was melancholy, depressed, irritable and physically exhausted. Yet I had a wonderful position, a lovely little son, a grand husband and a comfortable home—"everything in the world (as "Emily Anne" says) to be happy about."

I was practically on the verge of suicide when my doctor finally started giving me treatments designed to correct "endocrine imbalance." At first I had intravenous injections of ovarian hormones, and later the same medication in the form of pills. "Emily Anne" says she knows her trouble is "entirely functional"—and so was mine. Her family physician, being, as she says, "a country general practitioner," may not know how to prescribe for this type of ailment, but if she will see the right diagnostician I know she will make a complete recovery, just as I have. Sincerely,

MRS. H. T.

Basal Metabolism Test Recommended

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was amazed that you did not advise "Emily Anne" to go to a reliable, up-to-date physician and have a metabolism test before consulting a psychiatrist. If she is suffering from thyroid imbalance, as seems likely, no psychiatrist in the world can help her while this glandular ailment persists. Also, there is the possibility that in recommending a psychiatrist you will give her the idea that she is mentally unbalanced. In all cases of "extreme irritability" I think it best, always, to consult an internist, rather than a psychiatrist.

ANONYMOUS.

Relief From Baby Tending Suggested as Remedy

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps "Emily Anne" is just fed to the teeth with her darling children and her perfect husband. May I suggest that she employ a maid and hie herself out of the house with all speed? If I had her gift of expression I might have written you practically the same letter a short while back. All trifles played havoc with my nerves until I was ready to bite anybody within reach—and all because of my two lovable babies, from whom I could never escape. Their day-long wriggle and chatter would have worn down a woman of iron. Now I have a maid and a civil tongue in my head—not to mention a certain nerve-soothing freedom of action, now and again. Sincerely,

E. H. R.

Physician Seconds This Column's Advice

DEAR CORRESPONDENTS: Impressed by your unanimous (though various) disagreement with my advice to "Emily Anne," and perfectly willing to revise my recommendations, in case I had erred—I discussed her case (as her letter presents it) further today with one of Washington's ablest medical men. He is famed as an internist, diagnostician and pioneer in the field of endocrine medication.

This doctor said, in effect, that he had read "Emily Anne's" letter the day it was published; that he had been "impressed by her clear insight into her problem, as one of emotional instability," and that, on the basis of her narrative, psychiatric treatment seemed indicated. Why? Because, he pointed out, it is plain that the "home situation requires urgent, special attention, in order to protect the marriage. And if a psychiatrist's preliminary inquiry reveals no emotional basis for the wife's nervous distress, he will immediately refer her to an interist."

He went on to say it might have worked th other way around, of course. He explained that the best trained internists recognize and respect the value of psychiatry in dealing with problems of acute emotional disturbance,—and in his experience, he has occasion to send "about one patient in 10" to a psychiatrist.

There appears to be a confusion in the public mind concerning a reputable psychiatrist's approach to his work. The psychiatrist is quite as concerned as the internist in eliminating the possibility of organic or glandular causes of nervous distress, before proceeding on the theory that the patient's ills have a psychic origin. And his preparation for his profession includes full training in "medicine," so-called. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Maureen O'Hara Feted By Irish Envoy and Wife

Miss Maureen O'Hara, pretty young Irish movie star, stayed over in Washington yesterday following the birthday ball to be guest of honor at a small tea given by the Minister of Ireland and Mrs. Robert Brennan.

The three had never met before, as Miss O'Hara was only in Washington one other time, and then only stayed six hours. She was here on a personal appearance tour with another actress, Lucille Ball.

Like her host, Miss O'Hara comes from Dublin. She was a member of the famous Abbey Theater group and was discovered later by Charles Laughton, famous English actor, whose mother, incidentally, is Irish. Miss O'Hara's studio won't allow her to return to Ireland while the war is going on, owing to the danger of the trip these days.

The tea yesterday began at an early hour—3:30—as the attractive guest of honor had to take a 6 o'clock train back to California. She was particularly thrilled because at the luncheon at the White House for stars because she had sat next to President Roosevelt. When the usher gave her the plan of the table, and she saw herself placed next to the Chief Executive, she was positive there had been some mistake.

The star, who is still in her early twenties, made one request of her host yesterday—that she be allowed to sit down. A dash around to the many hotels for the birthday ball the night before had completely worn her out. But she didn't look tired, wearing a turquoise wool dress with low-heeled pumps and an off-the-face brown felt hat with a veil. Little gold earrings completed her outfit and she wore her dark hair in a short pigtail tied with a black ribbon bow.

Mrs. Brennan served tea, sitting at a table in front of the window in the living room. Two of the three Brennan daughters were present and assisted. They are Miss Maeve Brennan and Mrs. Sven Yort, who has been living in Chevy Chase since her marriage. The third sister, Mrs. Jerrold, makes her home in New York.

The hostess wore a simple black suit with a white blouse. Denis Devlin, secretary of the Irish Legation, was on hand.

The Minister told friends that he had bought himself a Spanish grammar and was studying the language. His previous acquaintance with the language, he said, developed when he studied it while in jail as a revolutionary!

Mme. Fotitch Among Guests

The Brennans are occupying the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Liggett on Twenty-third Street. The Liggetts have been dividing their time lately between their house in Connecticut and Florida, where they are now.

Spring flowers on the tables yesterday were of such vivid shades that, as one guest remarked, they almost didn't look real. Purple iris and yellow jonquils added a welcome dash to guests coming in from a gray day outside.

Mme. Fotich, wife of the Yugoslav Minister, dropped in for a cup of tea, wearing a mink coat over her frock. Mrs. Hamilton Fish was accompanied by her attractive debutante daughter, who said that her cousin, William Breese, and Mrs. Breese, are the proud parents of a daughter, born Thursday. Mrs. Breese is the former Miss Nora Magee, and her mother has come down from her home in Montreal to be with her.

Senora de Baron, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, dropped in to meet Miss O'Hara. Other guests included Mrs. Leo Pavlovsky, Mrs. Frederick Livesey, in a green suit with feathered hat to match and a hip-length fur jacket, and Mrs. Justin Miller, who wore black with clips of brilliants.

Father Hartke, head of the speech and drama department of Catholic University, and at one time a movie actor actor himself, was interested in what Miss O'Hara had to say. Several members of the Dramatic Club of the university also were among the guests.

Lily Pons To Be Feted

Another party on the social schedule at which the guest of honor will be a lovely star is that which Miss Carolyn Nash will give tomorrow for Lily Pons. The lovely singer is to appear at Constitution Hall, and afterward friends of Miss Nash will gather at the Carlton to meet her at a buffet supper.

Yesterday two luncheons featured the social calendar. Donna Julia Brambilla entertained at one at the 1925 F Street Club. Another was given by Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connor, who were hosts at their residence on Tracy Place. Their honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Willis Peck, who leave today for a visit in New York. Mr. Peck is Counselor of our embassy in Chungking, Chnia, but whether Mrs. Peck will return there with him hasn't yet been decided. Mr. Peck has been on temporary duty at the State Department since coming here several weeks ago. They have been widely entertained durihg their stay in Washington.

Two Dances Brighten Up Fading Season

Two dances last evening accented the calendar which shows promise of slowing down considerably for awhile. Bright with lights was the Sulgrave Club, where from 10 on members of the Friday Evening Supper Club danced. Missing from the throng were the usual number of debs and their beaux. Several dinner parties preceded the dance and among those entertaining were Mrs. John R. Williams and John Logan.

Meanwhile, exponents of the Friday Evening Dancing Class waltzed about the ballroom of the Willard Hotel. Maj. and Mrs. Parker West were among those entertaining at dinners beforehand.

A merry crowd gathered at the 1925 F Street Club last evening to attend Mr. Logan's dinner before going on to the last of this series of supper club dances. The first in the next series will be given next month.

Attending the dinner were Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mrs. Sidney Lee, Mrs. Pearsons Rust, Mrs. Thomas R. Cowell, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Mrs. William T. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, William Merriam, Fred Roy, Griffith Warfield, Irving Harris of New York City, Gen. Allen Gullion, William P. MacCracken and Alfons Landa.

Vandergrifts To Entertain For Mrs. Johnson

Honoring Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson, wife of the Ambassador to China, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Alexander A. Vandegrift will entertain at luncheon tomorrow at the Army and Navy Country Club, for 20 guests. Among the company will be Miss Elizabeth Johnson, sister of the Ambassador, and Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps.

Mrs. Johnson, one of the latest evacuees from China, has just recently arrived in Washington and with her two children "Nebe" aged 8 and Betty Jane, 5, has taken an apartment at the Brighton.

Mrs. Aspinwall Will Give a Tea

Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall will be hostess at a tea today at her home for friends interested in the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation. Mrs. Charles W. Kellogg, of New York, State director of the foundation, will show color slides depicting the beauty of Lee's birthplace, Stratford, as it has been restored and furnished by the foundation.

Pouring tea will be Mrs. Stephen Bonsal, Mrs. Frederick Brooke, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock and Miss Elizabeth Houghton. Generally assisting will be Mrs. Francis Addison, Miss Nancy Glover, Miss Anne Carter Greene, Mrs. J. Harris Franklin, Mrs. William H. Myer, Miss Mary Wilson and Mrs. J. Bernard Wyckoff.

Mrs. Stanley Reed will introduce the two principal speakers, Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, and Robert Lincoln O'Brien, National directors of the foundation planning to attend are Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Casanove Lee and Mrs. Harry B. Hawes.

Dr. and Mrs. John B. Marbury are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, John Bayne Marbury, jr., on January 26, in Garfield Hospital. Mrs. Marbury is the former Miss Ruth Alexander.

Justice Douglas And Wife Tender Dinner Party

Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas entertained at an informal dinner last night in their Silver Spring home. The party was one of many farewell fetes in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, who will leave soon to make their home in San Francisco.

Guests at the dinner were Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller, Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt. Dr. and Mrs. Grady will be guests of honor at a tea-time fete to be given this afternoon by Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck.

Jane Sousa Is Engaged

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Jane Priscilla Sousa, daughter of Mrs. John Philip Sousa, jr., of 1140 Fifth Avenue, New York, and the late Mr. Sousa, to James G. Gillon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Murray Gillon, of Cranford, N. J.

The prospective bride is a granddaughter of Mrs. John Philip Sousa, of Port Washington, Long Island, and the late John Philip Sousa, internationally famous American band conductor and composer, known as the March King, who was the leader of the United States Marine Band from 1880 to 1892 and later conducted his own band in approximately 10,000 concerts here and abroad. He composed the famous "Washington Post" march. Miss Sousa is a granddaughter also of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Adams, of New York. She attended Bishop's School at La Jolla, Calif., and studied in France. She was introduced during the season of 1936-37.

Mr. Gillon was graduated from the Juillard School of Music. The couple will be married in April.

Mrs. McInerney To Be Honor Guest Of Mrs. Somerville

Mrs. Thomas Somerville 3d will entertain at a luncheon in honor of Mrs. Michael McInerney today at the first fashion promenade in the Shoreham Blue room.

Others who will have guests with them include Mrs. Frank James Morrow, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Randolph Eddy, of Boston, who is visiting here; Mrs. Hamlin Alexander and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer.

A collection of original designs by Mme. Delia, who has designed court gowns for British royalty and debutantes bowing at Buckingham Palace, will be shown.

Daughter Born To Harold Bowens

Lieut. Harold G. Bowen, jr., U. S. N., and Mrs. Bowen, announce the birth of a daughter, their second, on January 29, at Emergency Hospital in Annapolis. The child will be named Margaret Edith.

Mrs. Bowen is the former Miss Constance K. Baker, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Wilder D. Baker. The baby's paternal grandparents are Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harold G. Bowen.

Texans Here

Col. and Mrs. George D. Graham, of Fort Sam Houston, Tex., are at the Martinique for a few days.

Mr. Davis Weds Anne Graham

At a quiet ceremony, witnessed by members of the family and a few close friends, Miss Anne L. Graham and Jackson C. Davis were married last night at Hotel 2400. The Rev. Andrew C. Bigelow officiated at the 8:30 o'clock ceremony.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Leo D. Heartt, of Raleigh, N. C., the bride wore a frock of white lace, fashioned on classic lines. A coronet and necklace of heirloom pearls and a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley completed her costume. There were no attendants.

Several Assist At Reception

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Joseph Graham and the late Dr. Graham of Durham, N. C., and Washington. She attended St. Mary's College in Raleigh and the University of North Carolina.

Mr. Davis, a native of Norfolk, Va., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Davis of Edenton, N. C. He attended William and Mary College and received an A. B. degree at the University of North Carolina. He is also a graduate of George Washington University Law School.

Following the ceremony there was a reception for the bridal party and out-of-town guests. Mrs. Graham, mother of the bride, assisted in receiving. She wore a gown of black lace, accented with an orchid corsage. Others in the house party were Mrs. Leo D. Heartt, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Marsh, Mrs. Davis, mother of the bridegroom; Mrs. L. P. Williams and Mrs. M. D. Watson, sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. C. F. Harvey, of Kinston, N. C., and Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Smallwood, of New York. Greeting guests in the foyer were Mr. and Mrs. R. D. W. Connor, Mr. and Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Mrs. J. D. Gillam and Mrs. Arthur Wilson.

To Make Home In Washington

Assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Tracy Ansell, Mrs. N. A. Townsend, Mrs. Guy Crampton and Mrs. Charles S. Murphy.

Among the guests from out of town were Mrs. Arthur Wilson, of Kinston, N. C.; Commander and Mrs. J. A. Hollowell, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hollowell, Mrs. Cecil Robertson and Mrs. Sue Byrd Goforth, of Norfolk, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. William P. Ellington, of Fayetteville, N. C., and Henry Cannon, of Richmond, Va.

After the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Davis left by motor for a trip to Florida. They will go to Cuba, also, before returning to Washington to make their home at the Wyoming Apartments.

Mrs. George Is Tea Guest Of Mrs. Taylor

A pleasant party was that of Mrs. Rene Jones Taylor, who entertained yesterday afternoon between 4 and 6 in honor of Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of Senator George, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate.

The hostess wore a deep-red velvet tea frock with collar and pockets embroidered in pearls. Her corsage was of roses and iris and she carried a nosegay of violets—a gift from her guest of honor. Mrs. George had chosen a black frock with an embroidered band circling the waist. Her unusual corsage consisted of rosebuds in the center of white tulips.

Creating a great deal of interest were the hostess' dolls, on display in an upstairs room. Mrs. Taylor has yet to complete her collection of dolls, dressed like the various First Ladies of the land.

Mrs. Wickard Attends Party

Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture was there, and a number of Congressional wives dropped in during the afternoon. Among them were Mrs. James Byrnes, Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, Mrs. Malcolm Tarver, Mrs. Paul Brown and Mrs. Hugh Peterson. Miss Pauletta Guffey was there, as were Mrs. Edmund Pendleton, wearing a lipstick-red frock; Mrs. Charles E. Fairman, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman and Mrs. Arthur Condon.

Assisting the hostess was her daughter, Miss Millie Taylor, wearing a pretty, sea-green crepe frock—floor length. The tea table was centered with yellow and white iris. Among those presiding at the tea table were Mrs. Howard Klossner, Mrs. Samuel Husbands, Mrs. Charles Henderson, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Edgar Kay and Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin.

Mrs. Daniels Chic in Gray

Chic in a gray wool costume with a heavy silver chain was Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniels. Lady Leslie was glimpsed in the throng, as were Mrs. Adrian Busick, wearing a red lame frock and silver fox scarf; Mrs. Bruce Wallace, Mme. Espaillat, Judge Annabelle Matthews, Senorita Minerva Bernadino and Mrs. Garland Ferguson.

A handsome brunette is Mrs. Horace Williams, of England, who is here "for the duration." She was there yesterday, as were Mrs. Rose Yates Forrester, Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. Randolph Blinn, in jade-green chiffon; Miss Lucy Witherspoon, Miss Dora Bailey, Mrs. Edgar Kay, Mrs. Julian Friant and Miss Dora Bailey. Among those assisting were Mrs. Emil Schram, Mrs. Frank Crippel, Mrs. Bennett Venbale, Mrs. Robert Armistead and Mrs. Wilson Taylor.

Klein Parkses On Honeymoon In the South

MR. AND MRS. Klein E. Parks are on a Southern trip following their marriage here Monday. Upon their return they will live at 4202 Third Road, Arlington, Va.

The bride is the former Miss Shirley Taft Nichols, daughter of Mrs. John Scott and the late William Frank Nichols. Mr. Parks is the son of Dr. and Mrs. James L. Parks, of Conehatta, Miss. The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock in the evening in the Calvary Baptist Church, with the Rev. William L. Abernethy officiating.

Given in marriage by her cousin, William J. Bright, the bride wore the traditional white satin gown. It was fashioned with a lace yoke and standing collar edged in seed pearls. Her veil fell the length of the long train. She carried a bouquet of roses, lilies of the valley and orchids.

Miss Carol Nichols, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore a turquoise faille taffeta frock and carried Johanna Hill roses. Bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Anderson, Miss Virginia Wood, Miss Virginia Maloney and Miss Doris Shuppe. They wore sunset taffeta frocks and carried muffs of Johanna Hill roses.

Richard Winkelman served as best man and ushers were Evans Beneditz, John R. Brock, Joseph Andrews and Victor Moschoff. A reception followed at home.

The bride attended George Washington University. Mr. Parks, who was graduated from East Central Junior College in Mississippi, now is attending George Washington University.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

AT A SMALL cocktail party the other afternoon I met the former Polish Minister to Japan, Michal Moscicki and Mme. Moscicka. Mr. Moscicki is a son of President Moscicki of Poland, now, of course, fled from his country, and a brother of Josef Moscicki, formerly stationed at the Polish Embassy in Washington. The Josef Moscickis were very popular here, and their transfer to Switzerland was much regretted. From Switzerland they were sent to England, where they now are, Mr. Moscicki having joined the Polish branch of the Royal Air Force.

The Michal Moscickis, who make their home in New York, are spending a few days at the Wardman Park Hotel and are renewing acquaintance with a group of old friends here, many of whom were stationed in Japan at the same time that they were. Among this group are the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais, Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg and Baron and Baroness Baeyens. The Baeyens entertained at dinner for the Moscickis the other night at their attractive house in Georgetown.

MME MOSCICKA is pretty, dresses smartly and has a flair for designing jewelry. In fact, she has designed most of her own jewelry in years past. Now she intends to turn her talent to commercial account and her friends are predicting a big success for her.

Among those gathered to meet the Moscickis the other afternoon were Mrs. George Howe and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock. Mrs. Krock was wearing a huge, sombrero-like hat in beige felt with a scarlet tassel in front and a beige wool frock. She said that the hat had been lent her by Mrs. Shaw Parker so that she might have it copied. Who says that ladies are catty and don't cooperate in the matter of spring bonnets? And, still speaking of hats, Martha Krock said that last Sunday she had a yearning for spring because the days are getting longer, and that she determinedly put on a white Panama hat and went out, only to have its upturned brim immediately filled with snow in the most unspringlike manner.

Also present to greet the Moscickis were Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Fleisher, Bea Phillips, looking very charming in black with a red flower in her hat, and Jacques de Thier, of the Belgian Embassy. The Fleisher family were owners for many years of an American newspaper in Tokyo. International politics being what they are, they were forced to sell the paper and Mr. and Mrs. Fleisher—she is Swedish—have come to live in Washington.

SIR GERALD CAMPBELL, new Minister-Counselor of the British Embassy, was ranking guest at a dinner given by Mrs. Robert T. Pell the other evening. Sir Gerald is an old friend of Mrs. Pell's father, the late Reginald Barker. The Minister is sure to be popular in Washington, as he has many friends both here and in New York, where he was formerly British Consul.

Other guests of Mrs. Pell were Mr. and Mrs. John Wiley, she stunning in black with a corsage of violets; the First Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Hoyer Millar, the Joseph Cottons, Mrs. Cotton in silver lame; Mrs. Anthony Coleby and Edward Weintal.

Margaret Fraser's House Is Leased By Rep. Gale

Representative and Mrs. Richard Gale, of Minnesota, have leased Miss Margaret Fraser's house at 3624 Prospect Avenue. They moved there yesterday to reside until the end of the Congressional session.

Miss Fraser will be at the Fairfax for several days before leaving by motor for a trip to California. Accompanying her will be Mrs. Mayo Smith. Miss Fraser's house formerly was occupied by Dr. Roberto Mendoza, of the Cuban Embassy.

Angelica Lloyd Coming to Wedding

Miss Angelica Lloyd, who is studying music in Boston, will return to Washington on February 20 for the wedding of Miss Nancy Leiter and Thomas Claggett February 22. Miss Lloyd will be here for three or four days.

Last evening Mrs. Demarest Lloyd entertained at an informal dinner party at her residence on R Street. Tonight she will give a similar party.

200 Give Testimonial Luncheon Honoring Mrs. Henry F. Grady

More than 200 friends of Mrs. Henry F. Grady gathered in the Presidential dining room of the Hotel Mayflower yesterday for a testimonial luncheon in her honor. The Supreme Court, the Diplomatic Corps, and all circles of official and residential society were represented in the group paying her an honor that rarely comes to departing Capital hostesses.

Helen Gahagan (Mrs. Melvyn Douglas), of Broadway and Hollywood fame, was master of ceremonies and introduced several speakers. Judge Marion J. Harron, of the United States Board of Tax Appeals, talked of Mrs. Grady "as a Californian." In the absence of Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of the Social Security Board, who was ill, her statement on Mrs. Grady "as a national leader" and her telegram of greeting were read by Mrs. May Thompson Evans, Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, talked of Mrs. Grady's attributes as a clubwoman, and Miss Minerva Bernadino, vice chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, outlined her accomplishments as "an international leader."

Completing the program of speeches, Miss Patricia Grady talked briefly on the subject of "Bringing Up Mother" . . . and brought down the house.

On behalf of all those who attended the luncheon Mrs. Raymond Clapper then presented to Mrs. Grady a wrist watch—a farewell gift from her many friends. Also handed over to her was a scroll, made by Mrs. Barnet Nover and bearing the names of all those present. Mrs. Grady's eloquent response rounded out the program.

Seated at the head table with Mrs. Douglas and the honor guest and the speakers were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot. Several wives of Senators and Representatives, and many diplomatic hostesses were at other tables.

Mrs. Helen Montford Moodie and Mrs. Frances Cabell Brown were in charge of arrangements for the luncheon. Members of their committee included Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. Clapper, Mrs. Wallace McClure, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Nover, Mrs. Samuel O. Herrick, Mrs. James Craig Peacock, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Mrs. Philip Dodson and Mrs. Frederick Halsted.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron will entertain at dinner tonight. Among their guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Lesley Gardner, of Hagerstown, Md., who are spending the week-end with them.

Miss Lucy Clagett, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. B. Clagett, will join her parents here for the week-end. She is a student at Bryn Mawr College. Mr. and Mrs. Clagett recently closed their home near Marlboro, Md., and are in Washington for the rest of the winter.

Mrs. William Frederick Halsey has given up her apartment at 917 Eighteenth Street and has moved to the One Half Century Place, Greenville, Del.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joyce will leave tomorrow for Cuba, where Mr. Joyce has been ordered for duty at the embassy.

Mrs. Walter Tuckerman entertained at a luncheon Thursday for 30 guests at the Republican Club. Sharing honors were Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster and Mrs. William E. Borah.

Mrs. Clarence E. Simmons was hostess to 24 friends at a luncheon and bridge party yesterday at her home in Arlington.

Mrs. Maurice McAshan has joined her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Clayton, for a visit. They are occupying the Hugh Wilson house on Woodland Drive.

Mrs. W. L. Dulin, of North Woodside, Md., has as her house guest, Mrs. Paul W. Gibson.

Byron Sedwick, of Silver Spring, and Dr. and Mrs. John W. Everett, of Washington, have gone to Atlantic City for a stay of five days at Haddon Hall.

D. A. R. Asks Curb on Aid Bill Powers

Calls on Congress To Keep Authority; Seeks to Support Britain Short of War

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Utue Editor

A resolution opposing the provision of the lend-lease bill, delegating to the executive branch of the Government unlimited powers, was passed yesterday by the board of management of the National Daughters of the American Revolution at its mid-winter session.

The resolution called upon members of Congress to "reserve to themselves the powers and responsibilities entrusted to them; to make such provision for aid to Great Britain and other countries now fighting for the preservation of democratic principles as will be least likely to involve this Nation in active participation in the war; and to increase with all possible speed the defenses of the United States."

Aside from this resolution, interest of the board members yesterday centered around the rumor of a pending announcement by Mrs. Frank Leon Nason, of Scituate, Mass., as a candidate for president general of the society to succeed Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr.

Mrs. Nason, interviewed at the Mayflower Hotel, where she is staying, said she had "not yet decided" but that if she did decide to become a candidate the announcement would be given to the press "within a few days."

Although Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York, past president of the Children of the American Revolution, who announced her ticket last summer, is a member highly regarded, she has been the only candidate in the field, and there has been a growing demand for Mrs. Nason's candidacy because of her vigorous stand on national defense to which the society has long been committed.

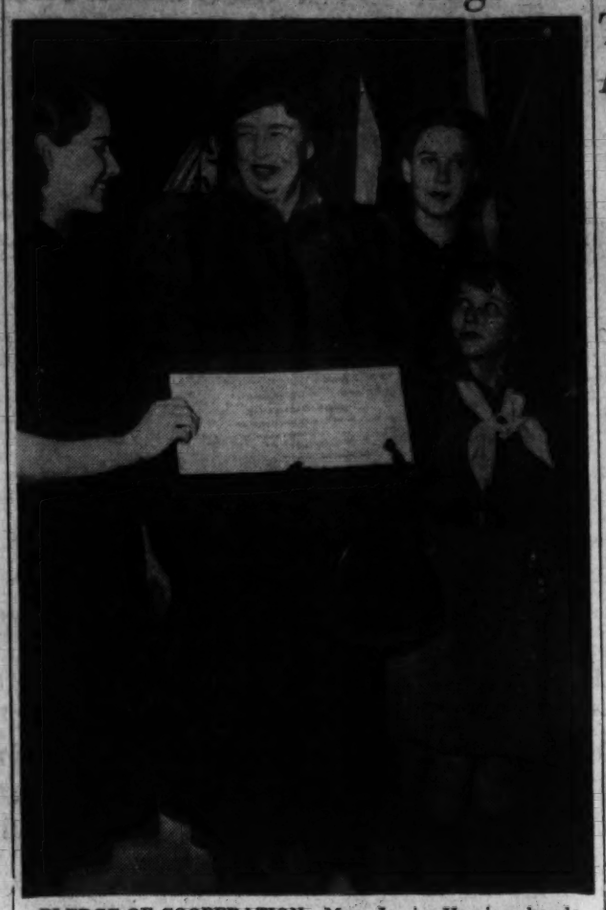
She is now registrar general of the organization. In addition to her record of service to the society, she was one of the women who did a man's work during the first world war, having taken the place of the quartermaster on a freight steamer during that period. Convinced that the D. A. R. has an important role to play in the program for national defense, her friends have urged her because of her background to become a candidate for president in April at the Continental Congress.

The national board members were entertained last night at a golden jubilee concert arranged by Mrs. Lois Marshall Hicks, District State chairman of the committee for the Advancement of American Music, and presented at Memorial Constitution Hall.

C. A. R. Meeting

Miss Mary Chubb will be hostess to the junior group of the Potomac Society Children of the American Revolution at her home, 4124 Jenifer Street Northwest, at 2 this afternoon. Miss Virginia Huey, junior president, will preside.

Girl Scouts Give Pledge



PLEDGE OF COOPERATION—Mary Louise Harrison hands Mrs. Roosevelt the "promissory note," pledging cooperation of 3,500 Washington Girl Scouts to community services in the interest of national defense. Mary Purcell and Dorothy Mandsville watch with interest

Girl Scouts Give First Lady 'Note' Pledging Defense Service

Washington's 3,500 Girl Scouts, representing the Nation's 600,000, yesterday presented to Mrs. Roosevelt a "promissory note" pledging "any required number of hours of community service in the interest of national defense." Through her, it will go to the President.

The presentation was made in Memorial Continental Hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution, with members of the national board of that organization and many other distinguished persons present. The body of the audience was comprised of the Girl Scouts themselves, all in the uniform and wearing their different colored ties and little hats. From the smallest girls of the Brownie troops, dressed in brown, to the oldest, in their wood-green dresses, or the blue of the Girl Scout Mariners, they were a wholesome, capable band of young Americans.

"You are performing a great service to your country," said Mrs. Roosevelt in accepting the "promissory note" handed to her by Mary Louise Harrison. "But you must remember that with the promise goes a great responsibility. You must recognize that a nation is only as strong as its individual citizens. It will be what you wish it to be. It will be a power in the world that stands for peace and justice if you, in your daily life, stand for those things. This means you must be kind, that you must see justice done in your community and must never shirk your part of the work in your community when it is for the good of its citizens and of your Nation."

Preceding the presentation of the note, a series of tableaux was given, illustrating the services of the Girl Scouts. The first showed their training in child care, and the others knitting and sewing; volunteer clerical work in social welfare agencies; conservation — "to help save America by saving America's resources"—first aid, making surgical dressings, doing emergency messenger service, and encouraging world friendship.

The program was opened by Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, former national president, after a procession of State flags. Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, of the District, a national vice president, described the establishment of service bureaus throughout the country in response to the plea of Girl Scouts that they be given opportunity to participate more actively in the national defense program.

British Goods On 'Safari'

"British Goods on Safari," a traveling exhibition of the British goods whose sale will help pay for Britain's bombers, will pull into Washington tonight and will be parked for a week in front of the British war-relief shop at 1018 Connecticut Avenue.

Miss Frances M. Martin, Bryn Mawr graduate from New York, and two Vassar girls, Miss Marjorie Forbes Ferguson, of New York, and Miss Katherine Lea Marshall, of Charlottesville, Va., are touring the country in aid of Britain with their traveling showroom, a Rolls Royce limousine with streamlined trailer bearing the crest of the embattled City of London and equipped with fitting rooms.

Orders placed with the Safari will be filled in a few days and Americans eager to help Britain can know that every dollar spent in this way will go to build up Great Britain's credits in this country, with which to pay for the planes and shells she is buying here from the "arsenal of democracy" and for American farm products to feed England. Britain urgently needs to sell British-made goods in this country in order to obtain exchange to be used by the British purchasing commission and every American dollar spent in this way goes to buy supplies from American manufacturers and farmers, all of whom employ American labor.

Contrary to widespread Nazi propaganda, says the announcement, British-made goods are successfully continuing to reach this country in regular shipments, and the Safari will show samples of many famous British products that American travelers have heretofore brought home from Piccadilly, but which can now be ordered here.

Wives of New Members Of Congress Form Club

Wives of new members who came in with the Seventy-seventh Congress, yesterday met at the Congressional Club and organized a group of their own to be known as the Seventy-seventh Club. It corresponds to those organized in former years by new Congress members' wives.

Mrs. Bob Sikes, of Florida, was elected president; Mrs. George A. Paddock, of Illinois, vice president; Mrs. Clinton P. Anderson, of New Mexico, secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Thomas Rolph, of California, Mrs. L. Mendel Rivers, of South Carolina and Mrs. Richard P. Gale, of Minnesota, on the membership committee.

Mrs. Miller Talks on WPA Aid to Defense

The relation of the program of the community service division of the Works Projects Administration to national defense was explained yesterday by Mrs. Izetta Jewel Miller, assistant to Mrs. Florence Kerr, director of the women's division of the WPA, in a talk at the annual preingathering luncheon of the Washington Council of Church Women. The luncheon, at which Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, presided, was held at the Hamline Methodist Church.

Since last summer, Mrs. Kerr has been placing emphasis on such phases of the program as public health, child feeding, training of housekeeping aides and recreation, said Mrs. Miller. There has been a marked increase in the enrollment in these projects during the past year, she pointed out. In public health work, the number has grown from 11,000 to 13,000; housekeeping aides, from 25,000 to 30,000, and in school feeding, from 14,000 to 42,000, by far the largest, she said.

She quoted Mrs. Kerr's statement: "I can never accept the necessity for any child in America to go hungry. If this occurs, it is due to a breakdown in our machinery."

D. C. Vassar Alumnae To Honor College Dean

The Washington Branch of the Vassar College Alumnae will have a luncheon today as its first meeting of the year. It will be at 1:15 at the Hay-Adams House with Miss C. Mildred Thompson, dean of the college, as guest of honor and speaker on scholarships. This subject is of special interest to the 300 members of the Washington branch as they support three scholarships at the college. Miss Thompson has been associated with the faculty of Vassar since 1908. She is the author of "Reconstruction in Georgia," "Carpetbaggers in the U. S. Senate" and numerous articles.

Presiding at the luncheon will be the new president of the local branch, Mrs. Roger Robb. Other new officers are Mrs. Lee Butler, vice president; Miss Theodore Malone, corresponding secretary, and Miss Mary Elizabeth West, secretary.

ANOTHER MEMBER has been added to the Woman's Auxiliary to the Panama Canal Society with spent a large part of her time in South and Central America.

Mrs. Greenwood is the widow of the late Dr. Greenwood, one the return of Mrs. Hugh Allison Greenwood, who, since 1915, has of two young physicians, graduates of Tulane University selected by Gen. William E. Gorgas to go to Panama at the time of the construction of the canal. Dr. Greenwood had recovered from yellow fever, and was immune, and in addition had the medical training required. When the United States was asked to mediate the boundary difficulty between Panama and Costa Rica, he was appointed to handle health problems for the boundary commission.

In this capacity Dr. Greenwood followed the old trails of migration in Costa Rica, and had permission to excavate and put his findings at the disposal of the Costa Rican government. When it had selected relics it desired, he was given the remainder. These, along with others from Peru, Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela, comprise a collection that Mrs. Greenwood presented three and a half years ago to Tulane University. She has since given many months in assisting to catalogue this collection which forms the nucleus for the Middle American Research Institute, of which she is an honorary associate. She also is an honorary member of the Tulane faculty. The collection, she says, illustrates the cultural interplay between north South America and south Central America.

Underwood & Underwood
MRS. HUGH S. GREENWOOD

Copper, bronze, pottery, carved stone textiles, feather work, carved wood and prehistoric gold work are included.

Mrs. Greenwood met her husband while on a visit to Costa Rica. They were married in 1915. She had been in social service work, in old Lenox Hill House in New York up to that time. There she encouraged a revival among the foreign born, especially the Czechs and Slovaks, of their native arts. She took with her to South America curtains that Bohemian girls had embroidered for her. Out of this interest in native work grew the Needlecraft Guild there.

She went as a bride to Ecuador, where her husband was in sanitary work for five years. From there they went to Mexico for a year and then to Venezuela, where they lived for 15 years.

Dr. Greenwood was one of the delegates from Venezuela to the Conference on International Tropical Health Problems, which made a tour of all Central and northern South American countries a few years ago.

Mrs. Greenwood, since returning to the United States, has spent part of the time in Chapel Hill, where she has attended courses at the University of North Carolina. She has returned to Washington to renew friendships in the Army and Navy set, with those she knew in Panama and to continue her interest in Latin-American work.

Benefit for D. A. R. School Set Today

A party for the benefit of Kate Duncan Smith School of the D. A. R. in Alabama, will be given this afternoon by Mrs. Harry R. Fulton and her daughter, Miss Carrie Roper Fulton, at their home from 2 to 5.

The guests of honor will be Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, State regent of the District of Columbia D. A. R., and Mrs. A. S. Mitchell, State regent of Alabama, and Mrs. A. C. Houghton, the D. C. State chairman of approved schools, and the following chapter representatives on her committee: Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, Mrs. Charles D. Hamel, Mrs. A. S. Field, Mrs. J. G. Gardner, Mrs. J. J. Dermody, Mrs. Catherine B. Strong and Miss Harriet Chase.

Form Spanish Classes, Urges Panama Woman

The teaching of Spanish in schools of the United States, and English in the schools of the Latin-American republics was urged yesterday by Mrs. Ruth Williams, a representative of the five federated clubs of the Canal Zone, in a broadcast under the auspices of the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

Presented by Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, radio chairman, and speaking over station WINX, Mrs. Williams described herself as being "from the center of America"—not Kansas but Panama.

"Speaking Spanish should be as natural for the children of the United States as speaking English," she said. "And in Spanish America, where it is not now being done, English should be taught in just the same way—from the kindergarten on up. Because, just as there cannot be any real understanding between persons who are not able to talk to each other, so there cannot be real understanding between nations which are not able to speak each other's language."

Mrs. Williams was among the speakers recently at the program held in the Pan American Union Building when the General Federation Board was in session.

British Aid Tea Planned In Historic Mansion

An historic Virginia mansion which often received George Washington and George Mason as guests in the early days of American independence will open its doors in aid of Britain tomorrow afternoon, when Mrs. George Shirley Kernan, of Mount Air, near Accotink, Va., will give a "silver tea" in benefit of the British War Relief.

Mrs. Boggs Hostess

Mrs. Verner C. Boggs will entertain the local alumnae club of Wilson College for Women in Chambersburg, Pa., this afternoon at 3 p. m. Miss Eleanor Bosserman, a graduate of Wilson College, who is on the staff at Hillcrest Children's Village, will speak on the work which is being done there for homeless children of Washington.

ANNA SKLEPOVICH AND POLICEWOMAN RICHARDS

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

There was a tall, well-schooled and quiet woman in the shove and push of the President's Birthday Celebrations who showed the bewildered "Cinderella," Anna Sklepovich, the West Virginia girl who cashed in on a hoax, how to take the sudden fame in her uneasy silver slippers.

Miss Rose Myrtle Richards, assigned by the Women's Bureau to chaperone 14-year-old Anna—who had come here from Gary, W. Va., on a mistaken notion that the President had invited her in response to her birthday greeting—did her best by the girl, simply "because I knew from the first that she was a wonderful girl."

Miss Richards watched over her like a mother, showed her the city, introduced her to important people, and taught her how to move among them. Anna proved a ready pupil.

"I plan to come back here. It's such a nice place," Anna said before leaving alone on a 1 p. m. plane yesterday to relate her experiences on a National broadcast in New York City.

Miss Richards, too, regretted ending a pleasant experience.

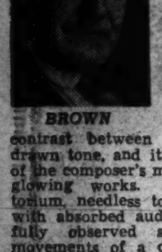
Postlude

A Delightful Evening Of Brahms

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents on Friday night the fifth concert in a series of eight devoted to the chamber music of Johannes Brahms. Artists: Pro Arte String Quartet (Antonio Brosa, Laurent Halleux, Germain Prevost and C. Warwick Evans) and Gunnar Johansen, piano. Program: Sonata in A major for violin and piano, Op. 100; Trio in C major for violin, violoncello and piano, Op 87; Quartet in C minor for piano and string, Op. 60.

Laurent Halleux, second violin of the Pro Arte String Quartet, had a vacation from the Brahms chamber music cycle last evening, while his colleagues collaborated by one, by two and by three with the vital young pianist, Gunnar Johansen, in a sonata, a trio and a quartet. It was a program just to the taste of those who like combinations of piano and strings for the contrast between percussive and drawn tone, and it contained three of the composer's most romantically glowing works. Coolidge Auditorium, needless to say, was filled with absorbed auditors who faithfully observed silence between movements of a composition, and then released their pent-up emotions in salvos of applause so spontaneous and sustained that the artists could not fail to recognize it as approval of excellent performances.



BROWN

Antonio Brosa and Mr. Johansen opened the concert with the beautiful A major sonata which contains two allusions that may or may not be evidences of Brahms' fondness for a joke. Every music-lover recognizes the likeness between the theme of the first movement and Walther's Preislied, and notices that the lively tune which breaks into the middle of the slow movement is straight from one of Grieg's sonatas. With the recent intimate reading of this work by Yehdi Menuhin and Hendrik Endt still fresh in memory, one could not help but feel that Brosa and Johansen were too gusty and vociferous in the disclosure of the "allegro amabile." That was the only complaint one could make about the manner of their eloquence.

The second work on the program, the piano trio in C major, brought C. Warwick Evans into the group. His rich violoncello tone was particularly admirable in the slow movement where its mellow color was like a strand of amber. Germain Prevost completed the foursome for the spirited and exciting performance of the C minor piano quartet which closed the concert.

"To many people, including professional reviewers," says John Mason Brown, "dramatic criticism must seem like an attempt to tattoo soap bubbles." What, then, must many people, including hapless music critics, think about musical criticism? For the music critic has an infinitely more difficult task than his theatrical colleague in trying to describe music and comment upon the subtleties of its performance. The dominant color of Brahms' music, for instance—sombre and northern for all its frequent flashes of folk-like happiness—is patent to all who are sensitive to atmospheric quality. Yet to put that into words does not describe it or give any idea of its emotional impingement upon the listener.

Progress 'on Order'

Shake-up Needed in Methods Of Children's Receiving Home

Following a series of visits to District welfare institutions by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt last year, efforts were announced to improve the management of five agencies. This the sixth and last of a series of articles in which The Post reports what it found during a recent investigation to discover what improvements had been made.

By James D. Secrest

The greatest progress made in the last year in reforms in District welfare institutions, if one includes those "on order," has occurred at the Children's Receiving Home.

A $100,000 new receiving home, which will permit proper segregation, is included in the 1942 budget estimates. Through a change in policy with regard to dependent children, the present receiving home at 816 Potomac Avenue Southeast is less crowded than ever in its history.

What the institution apparently needs most now, or that is after it transfers to a new home, is a severe shakeup in the system of handling children and a milder turnover in personnel. These problems are being studied by the Welfare Board.

Because the welfare department does not have control over the intake or the release of the children, their handling by the police is haphazard.

Charges on which children are committed to the receiving home range from "riding double on a bicycle" and "wading in a pool" to "robbery" and "assault."

Children have been held several days to two weeks for "investigation," although an adult cannot be held by police for more than 24 hours.

Often the children are released and returned to their parents without any charge being filed against them or without being referred to the Juvenile Court in accordance with law.

There is no machinery for referring delinquent children who are committed to the receiving home to a proper agency for observation.

Until very recently it was the practice to keep both dependent and delinquent children in the receiving home. This occasioned not only serious overcrowding, but it brought about the mixture of innocent children with the criminally inclined.

Dependent children are now cared for in boarding homes. The average daily population as a consequence has been reduced from 45 to 35. On the day of this reporter's visit there were only 20 children in the institution. Supt. Grady H. Leonard said the cramped quarters had housed as high as 70 in the old days.

The proposed new receiving home will care for a daily population of 33. While welfare officials asked for larger quarters, they now believe this may be adequate.

The new building will have facilities for segregation of children according to age, sex, race, and health. Recreation space will be provided, and the medical examination and treatment will be stepped up.

Now, as the part-time physician does not visit the receiving home daily, children come and go without once being checked for disease or organic disorders.

Welfare officials now are planning to add a nurse and a director of recreational facilities to the staff. At present custodial employes are called upon to take the children to the small outdoor playground.

The new receiving home will eliminate the residence of staff members, a situation which has caused criticism of the present institution.

The present receiving home is an old apartment house, never intended for the purpose to which it has been devoted. The children are packed into the bedrooms, with one bed almost touching the other.

A small room with a few games and a ping pong table provides the only recreational space indoors. A paved basketball court is outside.

Large iron screens which are kept locked give the home an aspect of the penal institutions.

The average length of stay at the home is slightly under five days. Yet records show that though the institution is intended as place of temporary detention pending court disposition of the case, some children have been kept there several weeks.

Most of the children are placed at the home by the police. Only a handful are committed directly by the Juvenile Court or the Board of Public Welfare.

The charge on which most children are committed is "investigation." The next largest classification is "taking property of another."

The third largest group falls under the charge of "unauthorized use of an automobile."

The ages of the children range from infants to youths approaching manhood.

Proposals have been made in the past to abolish the receiving home, and Baltimore has been cited as an example of a large city that operates without such an institution. A District welfare official once asked a Baltimore policeman what he did with delinquent children picked up late at night.

"Well, we're supposed to take them to their homes," he said, "but as a matter of fact we often hold 'em at the police station."

WJSV to Explain Rules of Contest For U.S. Employes

News about the recreational contest being held among Federal employes will be heard tonight at 7:45 o'clock over WJSV on the Government employe program, Your Government This Week. Two winners of the contest will be sent to St. Petersburg, Fla., for a week's vacation with all expenses paid. Both the radio program and the contest are being sponsored by the Federal Employe Council.

TENNYSON

Guests on tonight's program will be Milo F. Christiansen, acting coordinator, and Richard Tennyson, assistant director, of the District Recreation Department. They will tell of plans for additional recreational facilities here for the spring and summer.

Jerry Kluttz, editor of The Post's Federal Diary, will comment on news of the week of interest to Washington's 155,000 Federal workers.

Any Federal employe may enter the contest by writing a post card or letter to the council in care of WJSV and answering two questions. First, what recreational activity or hobby are you engaged in after office hours? And second, what can the council do to further recreational activities?

The contest closes February 16. There is no word limit and an employe may send in one or more entries.

The two winners will be sent to St. Petersburg aboard the Silver Meteor, Seaboard's new streamline train. They will be guests of the city at St. Petersburg and will make their headquarters at the Hotel Huntington.

328 Diplomas Awarded at 4 D. C. Schools

Two senior and two junior colored high schools yesterday graduated 328 students in midyear commencement exercises.

George W. Goodman, executive secretary of the Washington Urban League, told Cardozo High School's graduating class of 45 girls and 9 boys about job opportunities they might expect to find in the District.

R. M. Mattingly, principal, awarded American Legion medals to Ersalle Scott, class valedictorian, and Clifton Anderson. Sylvia Green was salutatorian, and Norma Gray received a special award for proficiency in typing. Mrs. Velma G. Williams, of the Board of Education, presented the diplomas.

Armstrong High graduated 58 boys and 52 girls in ceremonies led by Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of schools. H. A. Haynes, principal, gave American Legion awards to Elizabeth Chandler, valedictorian, and William Thompson. Edna Holmes was salutatorian. Dr. William H. Hastie, dean of the Howard University Law School and a civilian aide to the Secretary of War, was guest speaker.

Ernestine Leake was valedictorian for Banneker Junior High's graduating class of 16 boys and 35 girls, while Lillian Kyles and Jean Chase shared honors as salutatorian. Mrs. Julia West Hamilton, president of the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., and her son, Col. West Hamilton, of the Board of Education, were the speakers. Citizenship awards from the Danforth Foundation, of St. Louis, Mo., went to Francis Carey and Bernice Johnson, and the Walker Medal, for character and athletics, to Tony Wallace.

Revella Clay, an honor student at Dunbar High School, returned for a day to her junior high school, Browne, to be guest speaker at its graduation. She discussed the responsibilities of a beginning high school student.

Edward Chappelle, a member of Browne's graduating class, led a student discussion of foreign language studies at Browne. Mrs. Gladys T. Peterson, principal, received the class gift, an educational film on safety. Diplomas were presented by Mrs. Velma Williams, of the Board of Education.

American Legion awards were to James Walker, valedictorian, and Jayne Thomas, salutatorian; perfect three-year attendance awards were given to James Walker, Betty Frye and Archie Anderson; Katherine Pegram and Susie Lawson graduated with honors in domestic science; Charles Yates, honors in printing; Carl Johnson, Eunice Swan and Virginia Ferris, honors in general business; Jayne Thomas, honors in Latin; Joseph Cave and Edward Chatman, honors in metalcraft; William Duncan and Audrey Cotman, honors in Spanish. There were 74 girls and 38 boys in the class.

38 Initiated K. of C. Rites

Thirty-eight young men became Columbian Squires last night at initiation ceremonies starting the James Cardinal Gibbons Circle 380, Knights of Columbus.

A degree team from Philadelphia conducted the rites, which made the Washington circle one of 400 already organized in Knights of Columbus councils throughout the Nation. District Deputy Thomas Myers presided, and District Deputy Frank Malloy and Alfred A. McGarraghy, State deputy, participated in the ceremony.

Installed as officers of the Squires were: Tony Tancredi, chief squire; William P. Elwood, deputy Chief squire; James C. Latta, jr., notary; Francis Rowan, bursar; James McNamara, sentry; Olin Graves, marshal; James F. Cannon, captain; William P. Costello, captain; William Greaney, William Pike and Robert Brewer, auditors.

Other members are:

Edmund J. Berry, Donald B. Birmingham, William Cambrey, Joseph A. Cassell, Eugene J. Dailey, Ray Dean, John Flanagan, Marco L. Guerro, Neal J. Halpin, James P. Hennigan, Maurice J. Horan, Joseph Iverson, Robert Kilroy, John J. Kirlin, Jerry McLane, Anselo Massino, Anthony O. Mayhew, Pat. J. O'Donoghue, Bernard P. Peacock, jr., Norman Poblers, William Shanly, John F. Slattery, Douglas Soderstrom, Adolph Spagnoli, Paul Sukey, James Watts, Thomas Clemens.

They Shall Have Music Wherever They Go

Apparently with deliberation—and a moving van—thieves removed 61 automobile radios from a service station at 601 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest early yesterday, it was reported to police.

Marion G. Brown, station manager, told police the intruders also took 150 packages of cigarettes, overalls and rubber gloves, all valued at $268.

In 1940, D.C. Led Big Cities In Safety

Traffic deaths to date this year.. 13
Traffic deaths this date in 1940.. 5
Total traffic deaths for 1940..... 79

Washington had the lowest traffic death rate among cities of more than 500,000 population in 1940, the National Safety Council said yesterday in reporting that 96,500 persons were killed in all types of accidents in the United States last year.

The Capital had a rate of 10.5 per 100,000 population. It was followed by New York and Boston with 11.5 and Milwaukee with 11.6.

Motor vehicle accidents accounted for 34,400 of the fatalities, 2,014 more persons than were killed by autos in 1939. Public accidents, exclusive of automobile accidents, caused 15,500 deaths, while home accidents accounted for 32,500 fatalities and occupational accidents for 17,000.

The 9,100,000 injured represented an increase of about 300,000 over the 1939 figure, and the council figured that one out of every 15 persons in the United States suffered a disabling injury in 1940.

Increased activity in all fields, largely attributable to national defense, was the key to much of the 1940 increase, the council stated.

It emphasized, however, that a rising toll of deaths and injuries could not be accepted as an inevitable accompaniment of national preparedness, stating that successful accident prevention often had been achieved in the face of increased exposure.

Debt to Democracy Stressed As 7 Schools Graduate 695

Advice about job opportunities and the responsibilities of young people in a democracy were given yesterday to 695 students in midyear graduation exercises at seven senior and junior high schools.

McKinley High School's graduating class of 73 girls and 111 boys was the largest which took part in the round of commencement ceremonies.

Tiniest class was that at Chamberlain, a vocational school, where 13 girls and 5 boys received certificates for work in cosmetology, business studies, barbering, dressmaking and radio operating.

The radio operating certificate went to Roy J. Mikelbust after a six-month course in which he qualified for a license. Edward G. Reed, principal, explained that the school graduates its students on the basis of their skill, not their years of study.

Julia F. Crandall, chairman of the District's Board of Cosmetology, assured the nine graduates of that course that they would get jobs.

Saviour Sidotti, chairman of the District Board of Barber Examiners, praised the school as the first in Washington to seek improvement for the barbering profession. There were three barbering students in the class. Boise Bristor, statistician for the Board of Education, told the class they were fortunate to have received a kind of education that led directly into jobs.

Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, pointed out to the 47 girls and 39 boys graduating from Powell Junior High that their education had cost about $90 a year a person. Lester T. Walker, principal, told the class that as usual he felt that the school was losing its best pupils.

Marian Crawford was valedictorian, and Jack Myerson, salutatorian, of the Powell seniors. American Legion awards for outstanding school citizenship went to Patricia Bush and Jack Emmans. Other honor students were Elsie Bubb, Ruth Cooper, Nancy Hanck, the class president, and Marie Tiches.

Jeannette Freeman, valedictorian at Woodrow Wilson, and George Johnson, salutatorian, emphasized the responsibility of their classmates to contribute to national defense. Dr. Chester Holmes, first assistant superintendent of schools, told the graduates that among their democratic obligations was the ability to do a few things well.

Woodrow Wilson's American Legion citizenship awards went to Bill McKee, class president, and Mary Webb, class secretary. Ernest Courtney received a scholarship to the Wood Business College, and Edna Knowles was awarded a scholarship to the Peabody Conservatory of Music. Bernice Baer was announced as first in scholastic standing among the graduates. The class of 46 boys and 40 girls received diplomas from Norman Nelson, principal.

C. Melvin Sharpe, of the Board of Education, presided at McKinley's graduation exercises, and Principal Frank Daniel awarded the diplomas. Honor graduates included Jane Laidlaw, valedictorian; Barbara Waller, salutatorian, Jean Plass, June Plummer, Rosalie Fonoroff, Shirley Wolfel, Frances Birge and Eleanor Elizabeth Spangler.

Jean Plass and Rosalie Fonoroff received scholarships to the Wood Business College; Jane Laidlaw was awarded a scholarship at George Washington University, and Barbara Waller was given a $10 prize from the National Honor Society. American Legion awards went to Robert Fioramonti and Elizabeth Baird.

Central's graduating class, 87 girls and 62 boys, received their diplomas from Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education. Betty Clayman received a Wood College scholarship, and Lewis Eckhardt was awarded a medal for excellence in science.

Honor students at Central were Despina Bojokles, valedictorian; Frances Virginia Cohen, class historian, Yolanda Marie Contristan, Lillian Frances Golden, Ida Virginia Guill, Evelyn Irene Libert, Sophie Markowitz, Ruth Lee Rose, Eunice Evelyn Seitzinger, Rachel Solomon, Jerine Byrd Wann, Caroline Katherine Winterfeldt, Rhoda Wolman, Erwin Hecker and Russell Frederick Rozzelle, class president. Lawrence Hoover, principal, announced the awards.

Western High graduated 26 boys and 35 girls, headed by Edith Norris, valedictorian, and Carolyn Lyn, salutatorian. Dr. Christopher Browne Garnett, a graduate of Western and now associate philosophy professor at George Washington, and Dr. Elmer S. Newton, principal, were the speakers. Charles D. Drayton, of the Board of Education, presided.

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, of the Board of Education, awarded diplomas to 57 boys and 55 girls at Alice Deal Junior High. Patsy Robertson was valedictorian, and Barbara Hunt gave the address of welcome. Miss Bertie Backus, principal, presented the class their diplomas.

Mementoes Given 3 Retiring Employes of Patent Office

FAREWELL GIFTS—Charles H. Gray, retiring from the Patent Office after 48 years of service, receives from James A. Brearley, chief clerk, gifts presented on behalf of fellow employes

The Patent Office lost through retirement yesterday three veteran employes whose combined service totals 132 years. They were Charles H. Gray, 1419 Foxhall Road Northwest, chief of the assignment division; William O. Siebold, 1701 Twentieth Street Northwest, patent examiner, and Guida C. Callan, 3511 Eleventh Street Northwest, assistant chief, trade-mark division of the Patent Office.

SIEBOLD

Gray retires after 48 years' service and was presented a gladstone bag, a black leather brief case and a combination calendar and clock in addition to a signed testimonial. He plans to continue work as a patent attorney with A. Yates Dowell, local patent attorney.

Siebold, a Spanish-American War veteran, with 35 years' service, was presented with a swivel chair, a fluorescent desk lamp and a testimonial from his friends. He is an ardent stamp collector and will devote much of his new-found leisure to collecting and dealing in stamps. He is a graduate of Columbian College, which is now the George Washington University Law School.

CALLAN

The third of the trio, Guida C. Callan, a Patent Office veteran of 49 years, was presented with a purse and a signed testimonial from his colleagues. He hopes to practice as a counselor in matters relating to trade-mark problems.

4 Detectives To Move Up In D. C. Force

Two promotions and two "designations" for detectives were made public at Police Headquarters yesterday.

Precinct Detectives Marvin O. Myers and James E. Kane, both of the First Precinct, were promoted to the rank of sergeant to fill vacancies caused by the defense emergency.

Lieut. Earl P. Hartman, chief of a special investigations squad, and Detective Sergt. Charles E. Warfield were designated to be acting captain and acting lieutenant respectively.

The Post learned last night that a minor shakeup in the Detective Bureau will take effect today with the consolidation of at least two squads and the change of assignment of several detective sergeants.

The fugitive squad will be combined with the Pickup Squad, it was learned, a move long favored by Maj. Ernest W. Brown.

Myers, 34, of 2223 Fourteenth Street Southeast, was appointed to the force September 1, 1934, and was made a precinct detective five years later.

Kane's promotion climaxes a 9-year fight for reinstatement to the Detective Office after a demotion from the same rank in 1931. Kane, 50, was appointed to the force in 1919 and arose to the rank of detective sergeant in 1929. Two years later he was demoted to uniform only to win back the rank of precinct detective 7 months later. He lives at 631 Florence Street Northeast.

Kane and Myers, each to receive $360 additional compensation annually, fill positions vacated by Detective Sergts. William G. Shipman and John Behan, both on duty as naval officers.

Hartman, 46, has risen from private to his new rank in 12 years. He was one of the few men ever raised from private to detective sergeant in one step. He won the latter rank in 1932 and shortly afterward distinguished himself in the Allen B. Wilson murder case and the jury tampering in the Warring case.

A veteran of 36 years' service, Warfield will become relief lieutenant in the Detective Office. He was first sworn in in 1905, becoming a detective sergeant in 1927. He was made chief of the clothing and jewelry squad, a job he has held until the present.

In 1913 Warfield was bitten by a mad dog while saving a child. He was given the Pasteur treatment, which reacted unfavorably and paralyzed both legs. He was confined to bed for more than a year.

The following were named class 1 privates, 15 to replace those on military leave and 12 to fill vacancies:

William D. Barnett, jr., George R. Bongers, Sam H. Brennan, jr., Franklin R. Chaimson, Clarence A. Chaney, Wilbur R. Coffey, Houstis M. Cook, Joseph L. Costello, Warren A. Dalrymple, Dudley P. Dungan, Percy C. Duvall, Robert L. Goldston, jr., Aloysius M. Guelig, Charles E. Hauser, James M. Jackson, John A. Jones, Gerald S. Landman, Edward M. Lounsbery, jr., Laurence L. Mason, Louis A. McCracken, jr., Allison A. Meiklejohn, Elbert Y. Poole, Nelson S Rickey, Olof J. Schelin, Joseph F. Slifka, Paul F. Thorne, Julian S. Whitestone.

Nine privates were added to the force for the remaining six months of this fiscal year. They are:

John T. Bailey, Stanley J. Cooper, Donald B. Finetti, Frank Floyd, Alphious D. Mastess, Wilbur T. O'Brien, John A. Porch, Hubert T. Taylor and Robert H. Wolf.

D. C. to Name Two New Schools For Educators

The names of Washington's next two schools will be those of veteran District educators, the late Dr. Stephen E. Kramer and the late Dr. Ephraim G. Kimball, a subcommittee of the Board of Education decided yesterday.

The $820,000 junior high school to be built in Anacostia will be named for Dr. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools for nearly half of his 46 years in the District school system. Dr. Kramer died in June, 1936. The school is to be ready by September, 1942.

A proposed grade school, also in Anacostia, for which $210,000 is being sought in the 1942 District budget, will be named for Dr. Kimball, former supervising principal, who died two years ago.

'Buck Privates,' at Keith's, Laughs Army Into Favor

Abbott and Costello Come to Life Hilariously In First Comedy Based on Conscription Law; Supplementary Features Lend Bill Variety

"BUCK PRIVATES." Universal picturization of an original screen play by Arthur T. Horman, costarring Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, with Lee Bowman, Alan Curtis, Jane Frazee, the Andrew Sisters, Nat Pendleton, Samuel S. Hinds, Harry Strange, Nella Walker, Leonard Elliott, Shemp Howard and Mike Frankovitch. Directed by Arthur Lubin. At RKO-Keith's.

DESIGNED PRIMARILY to skim the cream of the fun off the ludicrous side of life in Uncle Sam's rapidly expanding civilian army, "Buck Privates" also has some interesting and valuable things to say about the value to the individual of military training. Both its comedy and its "message" are conveyed in familiar terms. Yesterday's first audience at RKO-Keith's Theater found it alternately hilarious and inspiring and, in between, occasionally a little less than continuously top-hole, although frequent musical interruptions pick up the tempo when things seem likely to get too much out of step.

BELL

Not only is "Buck Privates" being shown for the first time in Washington by one of those eleventh-hour, "sneak" bookings, but it is the first comedy utilizing the recently enacted conscription legislation as a basis of slapstick entertainment to reach any American screen. With Abbott and Costello as its stars it could not be expected to be too subtle or even too sane. It is neither. But there are moments when it is convulsingly funny and the songs are whipped over in lusty and approved canteen style by the Andrews Sisters and others of the cast highly skilled in the tricky art of "selling the customers."

The skeleton "plot" contrived by Arthur T. Horman has been fashioned shrewdly enough. The way is paved for all of the later comedy sequences and running "gags" by an amusing opening scene in which social distinctions are obliterated by the enlistment blanks. A pair of hawkers, selling $1.50 neckties for a dime from a street corner "pitch," think they are going to a movie when they fall into line in front of the recruiting office to elude the cop on the beat. The millionaire's playboy-son drops in to explain that his dollar-a-year dad is in Washington "fixing it" for him. His chauffeur thinks the Army would be better than his crazy boss, and so it goes. In camp, the pitchmen become the gentlemen of the title, the cop turns up as the top sergeant and the hated young wastrel proves the hero of the field maneuvers and even wins the respect of his former "man" and the camp hostess they both think is quite a gal. A distinctly second-hand framework, but it has been pretty securely nailed together in the present instance.

Abbott and Costello, Lee Bowman, Nat Pendleton and Alan Curtis carry the burden of the "story" lightly. Of these, the globular and piping-voiced Costello is the wheelhorse. The comic material provided him and his partner in this subject is far and away better than that supplied them in "One Night in the Tropics," their first dreary adventure before the cameras. Costello creeps up toward the first rank of the slapstickers in his exhibition boxing bout, the drill sequences, his kitchen police tour of duty, the craps games and the scenes in barracks, where he keeps perpetually in Sergt. Mike Collins' hair. Abbott, as usual, is merely his "straight man." Nat Pendleton is the blustering top kick and Bowman and Curtis fight it out nicely with some solid socks on the button for the favor of Jane Frazee, the pick of the camp hostesses. Practically all of them wind up in the officers training camp, shooting at commissions.

Also among the hostesses are the Andrews Sisters, who turn the full power of their harmony loose on such rousing numbers as "You're a Lucky Fellow, Mr. Smith"—a musicalized endorsement of the draft law—"Boogie Woogie Bugle Boys," with the wildest "Boogie Woogie" dancers in captivity, and the liltingly romantic "I'll Be With You in Apple Blossom Time." Costello rattles his way through "When Private Brown Becomes a Captain," an eventuality that promises widespread reform in United States Army methods. Suffusing all this are the constant overtones of fidelity to the flag and the high privilege of being a soldier. On the evidence of the picture, "Buck Privates" don't do so badly, at that.

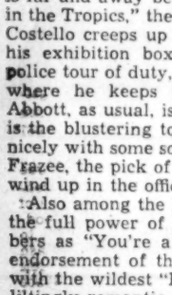
That isn't all you get on the new bill at Keith's. Clifton Fadiman conducts John Kieran, Franklin P. Adams, Oscar Levant and Alice Marble, as guest expert, through a new issue of "Information Please" and a new release in the "Stranger Than Fiction" series reveals all manner of odd things. The Pathe News and an Andy Panda cartoon comedy in color, "The Mouse Trappers," with a voice dangerously like W. C. Field's, further augment a feature which doubtless is blazing a trail for many more like it.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 31.

The story behind Deanna Durbin's personal appearance tour which ends in Miami, Fla., February 4, for the premiere of "Back Street" is rather sweet. Bruce Manning, who wrote six of Deanna's last pictures, has known her ever since she was a kid. And in the old days, Deanna always maintained she'd be an old maid. At which Manning would laugh and say, "Yes, you'll be an old maid like I'll always remain just a writer. Some day I'm giving up writing, and I'm going to produce pictures."



HOPPER

And she said, "All right, I'll make a pact. When you become that important, I'll make a personal appearance with your first picture." His first production is "Back Street," which she's not in, but she's keeping her promise, and that's the story behind Deanna's first personal appearance tour.

Bob Cummings took time off on the set for "The Devil and Miss Jones" to reminisce. For more than a year Bob played the juvenile in the "Ziegfeld Follies" of 1933. Vivien Janis was starred. They disliked each other from the start, tripped each other on the stage, and swore under their breath in the wings.

And how Broadway laughed when they posed together for a Chesterfield ad, as a couple of lovey-doveys! So one day Bob, tired of the continual battle, said to her, "Let's call this feud off and, just for a change, call each other 'Honeybunch' and 'Darling'." Three weeks later, to the day, they were married.

Not till the end of the season did Bob discover she was getting $750 a week to his $150. Then he shouted, "It's off—we've got to be divorced. I can't live with a woman who's making five times as much as I am." Vivien talked him out of his tantrum, and a few months later they headed for the coast, where things didn't go so well at first.

Here's one of those stories you hear so seldom. Director James Hogan was borrowed from Paramount by Larry Darmour to make the second "Ellery Queen" picture, which stars Margaret Lindsay. When it was finished, Darmour came on the set and handed Hogan a check, which was a bonus, because he liked the picture. Incidentally, Hogan's crazy about Margaret Lindsay and wants to star her in his next.

Director E. H. Griffith isn't the big shot he thinks he is among the workers. Seems there's a squeaky door on the stage where he's working and he had a sign painted which read, "If you must use this door, use it quietly." Well, after he called for quiet the other day, this door banged open and shut. A laborer walked through, and Griffith said, "Can't you read?" Without changing his pace, workman replied, "I can not only read—I painted the darned thing." And kept right on going.

Other evening at the Haymarket Cafe, Writer Les Carson suggested to Jack Barrymore that they have a bite to eat: "Let's have a drink first," said the Great Profile, "I can't eat on an empty stomach."

Groucho Marx asked his secretary to get Arthur Murray on the phone. Fifteen minutes later, he yelled, "Where's Murray?" The girl started to speak, and he shouted, "Don't give me excuses—give me Murray!" A minute later he was told Murray was on the phone. He grabbed it and asked Murray if he'd come to dinner that evening. "Sure," said Murray, "if you'll pay my plane fare. You see, I'm at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York."

Polack ..... Gerald Warthen
Flaherty ..... Edgar C. Faris, Jr.

After a particularly trying period, the Washington Civic Theater last night regained its full name as well as its disputed laurels. With Leon Askin as director, the group offered an admirable production of Irwin Shaw's "The Gentle People," in the Wardman Park Theater. Mr. Shaw's Brooklyn fable will continue through Wednesday evening and is worth anybody's money.

"The Gentle People" is fanciful and penetrating, genial and exciting. Despite the fact that it is a parable, it is anything but "arty." And in the steam bath scene, in which a sharp counterpoint plays opposite the story of the play, "The Gentle People" has as richly inventive a scene as recent seasons have brought to the American theater.

Under Mr. Askin's understanding guidance and before William Girvan's effective settings, the Civic players do well by author Shaw. To a script filled with glints of wisdom and humor they bring portraits that are always intelligently conceived.

Don't look glum when you learn that "The Gentle People" concerns the clash of a couple of tired old men and their discouraged associates with a gangster whose ambition overreaches him. It's a comedy and it isn't particularly unfair to tell you there's a gloriously happy ending to some sordid adventures, although the author has remarked that he "does not pretend that this is the case in real life."

More Than Meets Eye Or Ear

Jonah Goodman's only joy in life are his four evenings a week with his friend Philip Anagnos. They fish, save their money and dream of sailing in the sunshine of the Gulf Stream some happy day. Stella is Jonah's daughter, a desperate girl who prefers her daydreams of grandeur to her job with the electrical company or marriage with an unimaginative boy friend. Harold Goff is a racketeer who determines to milk the two old men of all the money he can. That he is attracted by Stella is to him secondary, to her fortunate.

It is in the superb Turkish bath scene, where Jonah goes after Goff has beaten him, that the two men make up their minds on how to proceed. The Law has not helped them and they plan their own solution, grim and exciting.

Mr. Askin's direction stresses the fact that there's more to Shaw's comedy than meets the ear or catches the eye. There is always something in the characters' minds that hovers just below the surface and Shaw has left it to his audiences to search for those lines themselves. Last night's house was evidently fascinated.

Ted Tenley is first rate as Jonah, the role played in the original production of two years ago by Sam Jaffe. His bewildered little man finally sees the light in a fashion that each of his watchers feel. Robert Langley is better than he has ever shown himself in the role of the racketeer, created by Franchot Tone. Lansing Hall, too, surpasses her previous performances as Stella, though one might wish her costumes were more in keeping with the character.

The superlatively effective settings by Mr. Girvan added the all-important touch of authority to a production which should lift the Civic hearts high. Again they have given us a play which E Street has not seen; they have located a highly satisfying one and they have done it admirably.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Jan. 31.

GRETA GARBO, like the President's secretary, has a true passion for anonymity. She's sincere in her preference for non-recognition and would not sign her autograph for even her intimate friends. At the St. Regis recently she attended a dinner party at which Sir Charles Mendl, Lady Mendl and Erich Remarque were among the guests. Remarque suggested that, as a memento of the enjoyable evening, they all sign the dinner menu. All the guests signed their names. Miss Garbo merely wrote "X X" . . . Last night she dined at the home of Ossip Pernikoff. A phrenologist was engaged to entertain the guests by telling their fortunes. She sat alone, in an inner room, while each guest entered to hear the future revealed. When Garbo's turn came she borrowed a handkerchief from Gaylord Hauser, draped it over her head, to mask her face, and thus went into the room to have her fortune told.

RECENT ARRIVALS from Vienna report that Dr. Ignatz Griebl, who fled from this country after confessing his Nazi spy activities to the Federal Government, was killed during a riot there . . . Harold W. Hastings and Thomas E. Dewey, who were rival candidates for the district attorneyship, will lecture about crime, in a series for WYNC . . . Dean Alfange is the Administration's favorite for the Democratic nomination, in the special election to be held for the Congressional job vacated by the death of Kenneth Simpson. Robert F. Wagner, jr., however, may enter the lists . . . Elinore Herrick, of the National Labor Relations Board, has been operated upon at Brooklyn Hospital.

ARTIE SHAW entered the Maison Louis, a few minutes after Benny Goodman had left. Shaw sat down at the table which had just been vacated by Goodman . . . The breathless waiter told Artie of this coincidence . . . "Well, since there's some dispute as to which of us is the better clarinet player," said Shaw, "suppose you be the judge and decide which of us has better table manners."

THE ALARMS which rang through Radio City Friday night, and brought the armed guards running, were touched off by a lady who merely had been lost in the stairways and tried to use the emergency exit. She was Mrs. George S. Kaufman, who convinced the policemen standing there with guns drawn that all other exits had been locked . . . Abe Lyman, who once bought a diamond ring for Eleanor Powell, confessed that he kept it, as an investment. "Why," Lyman was asked, "did you think it would grow?" . . . Danny Kaye, the town's newest favorite, had to perform for two hours at his La Martinque premiere last night because the customers wouldn't let him off.

MILTON BERGER, publicist for Harry Carey, did some publicity work for Charles Atlas, the muscle-builder who has received many awards as the possessor of the most masculine figure . . . As a press stunt, Berger located a couple who were planning to be divorced. For due consideration the husband agreed to insert in his complaint a charge of cruelty based upon the fact that his wife had a photo of Atlas in their room and plagued him by constantly wailing: "Why isn't your figure like his? . . . The press agent then invited the cities of Reno and Miami to bid for the rights to this divorce suit, with its resultant publicity . . . That same day he arranged for Atlas to display his body on a television program—but stil wasn't content. He tried to get some televisioner to demand Atlas' arrest—on a charge of indecent exposure.

FREDERIC COUDERT, JR.'S decision to be the Republican candidate for Kenneth Simpson's Congressional post will present a dilemma to the American Labor Party's County Committee here, which is ruled by left-wingers. Pat O'Brien must have been wearing a four leaf clover when he signed that new deal with Twentieth Century-Fox. I say it is a lucky deal for Pat because Twentieth, perhaps more than any other lot, is a man's studio. They go in for those he-men opuses on a big scale and Pat, after his big hit in "Knute Rockne," is just the boy for them.

A luncheon given Ernest Hemingway by Y. Frank Freeman today at Paramount was thoroughly enjoyable. I had a chance to talk with the author of the best seller, "For Whom the Bell Tolls," and he has very definite ideas of casting. He says Annabella would fit the type of Maria perfectly. He also admires Ingrid Bergman, but as for Robert Jordan, there is only one actor in his mind and that is Gary Cooper.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Betty Grable and Robert Stack had eyes only for each other at Ciro's; Liz Whitney and Walter Brooks dancing to Coleman's music; Cy Bartlett and beauteous Ellen Drew acting as if they meant it; the distinguished looking man with Lady Furness was Commander Seagrist of the British naval force; the beautiful woman with Reginald Gardiner at the Mocambo, who looks like Hedy Lamarr, was really Mrs. Helen Mendenball, San Francisco socialite; her husband is a friend of Reggie's.

Sandy Cummings has been called to the draft in five weeks; wonder if Maureen O'Sullivan will make a picture for Arthur Hornblow; they were dining at the Mocambo; Mrs. Sylvia Fairbanks and Raymond Hakim with friends at the Scheherazade; Tony Martin has planed to New York for the Louis fight and to see his heart-beat Lana Turner.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on his vacation his column is being written by other members of The Post sports staff.)

By Jack Munhall

The fanatical gleam of a crusader in his keen eyes, Charley Peterson is still at it. It takes a billiard player to dig up new angles and this wiry, middle-aged fellow continually is doing it. For years now Peterson has been traveling the breadth of the land promoting interest in billiards at clubs and schools and colleges.

MUNHALL

Unrelenting is his fight to remove the unsavory stigma of a toughie sport from billiards and really make it a parlor game for immaculate gentlemen and ladies.

"Show me a trick shot I can't make" is the cry of the master of all fancy shots, and though there are no records to prove it, it is reported that only once has he balked at the balkline. Jack Doyle, the oddly successful odds-layer, who'll wager on anything, claims he put the cue ball at one end of the table, the spot ball at the opposite end and the red ball beneath the table and that Peterson refused to come up to scratch. Peterson steadfastly denies such a proffered test.

And it is fact that this amazing fellow has strutted his cue on and under land and even in the air. Accepting a challenge, Peterson once while swaying uncertainly in a fast-moving plane ran off 37 points in only a few seconds under his best time on the ground.

The mild-manner little man with the receding blond hair who recently stopped in the sports department amid his country-wide tour, always was and still is something of a Red Menace with his stick. Rivals go on to championships in 18.1, 18.2, three-cushion and even straight rail billiards, but when it comes to keeping the red ball moving Peterson is as good as a Soviet emissary. He is the "red ball champion," meaning he is tops at that game where that colored ball must be hit first before the counting begins.

Going about the schools and colleges Peterson gives trick shot exhibitions, lectures and acts as referee at student and faculty tournaments.

"You might be surprised to learn," he boasts, "that the colleges are going for billiards in a big way. In the last three years membership in the Associate of College Unions, which handles the tournaments, has jumped from 30 to more than 50 and there seems to be an unusual increase in spectator interest."

But Peterson couldn't expect to get Navy into the billiard league because that service school is in favor only of games that can be put to nautical use.

To this Peterson queried mildly "Is that so, I never heard of football being played in submarines? And did you ever try to play baseball on the deck of a destroyer? But really there's plenty of college rivalry in billiards—of various kinds."

By various kinds Peterson meant good and bad.

"Oh no," he protested, "most of the kids learn remarkably fast and play a good game, considering the time it requires to become expert at clicking the three balls together.

But Notre Dame-Army at billiards hardly would rival Notre Dame-Army at football. And intercollegiate straight rails scarcely would draw more people than the Pouhkeepsie Regatta.

Mr. Peterson let that one go by with a wry smile and went on to say: "Found one college professor who likes his students to take up billiards in connection with geometry. It's all a matter of angles, you know geometric calculation. Might even be able to play for your course in the process. Anyhow you figure out a shot as you would a geometric problem. The professor is really serious about this. You see the table is exactly twice as long as it is wide, and with the side rails as a guide, you can measure off into triangulars the whole playing service. In fact, that's the proper way to play billiards. So you can see that—"

It is easy to see that geometry would become a popular subject if the students could attack it with a cue. Or perhaps Mr. Peterson's theories could be applied with equal success to pocket billiards. "Pool" to you, slug.

Imagine a game of nine-ball among a group of students, armed with ruler, pencil and paper, not to forget the cue. They could play a whale of a game. It might be a bit lengthy and certainly not very fast and the "house" would be whipped into a financial frenzy at the usual 5-cents-a-game rate. However, the parlor proprietors could get around that by installing the game on the straight 60-cents-an-hour basis and produce a real boom.

Greenbacks on the green and it would be educational, too.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 31.—Dear to the heart of every Hollywood ham is the Coast's newest baseball sensation, Louie Novikoff. He is the droll Russian who is hailed here as the new Babe Ruth. Once he gets his contract troubles straightened out, Louie officially will be a member of the Chicago Cubs outfield and his clownish antics and corny quotations soon will undergo the white-hot blast of big league competition.

CONSIDINE

Louie was slightly terrific here, all right. The big league scouts who watched him last season were just about unanimous in predicting that he'd hit big league pitching. They didn't say anything about his fielding, for he won't be able to field well in any league. In his own words he can out-Babe-Herman Babe Herman at Babe Herman's game. The scouts reported that he had a good throwing arm, however, which comes in handy after he dropkicks those grounders to the outfield or picks up a thumby miss of a fly ball.

There was no widespread bidding for him because it was a foregone conclusion that he would go to the "Angel" of the Los Angeles Angels—Phil Wrigley. The Angels announced that they had sold Novikoff and the club's fine young second baseman, Lou Stringer, to Chicago for $150,000. This was probably another way of saying that Wrigley would continue to underwrite the local club for another couple of years, in exchange for two items of baseball merchandise developed therein.

Before he reached the Coast League he led (or was runner-up) in the National Nite, the Western, the Three Eye and the Texas Leagues in hitting. He hit .363 here last year, after going over the .400 mark at one point well along in the season. He knocked in 171 runs during the long (174 game) Coast League season. He hit 41 home runs, but is not looked upon as a home run hitter here. At least not as much as he is regarded as a powerful line drive hitter. He is righthanded and hits those low Dimaggio liners to left center.

In case you were confused by the National Nite League, it is a softball league. He was a star softball pitcher and outfielder for the Huntington Beach Oilers, which was the best softball team in the West for the three years he was on the team. That was 1934, 1935 and 1936. He became a great attraction in this ersatz sport, and drew crowds of as many as 8,000 customers, at two bits a head. He got $70 for one game he pitched—which is pretty dazzling for one of those athletes.

His oil company boss, Joe Rodgers, saw the makings of a fine hard ball player in Novikoff (who was then called Lou Nevi) and tried to get Oakland and later Hollywood interested in giving him a trial. But neither would. Then Rogers got him into the Angels' pre-training school, which is held each year before the Angels begin their spring training season.

Some fine ball players have come up out of that school, among them Marvin Owen, Jerry Priddy, Steve Messner and Rip Russell. But the Angels weren't impressed with Novikoff, even though he belted a few out of the lot in batting practice. Earl Hamilton, managr of Ponca City, got him. That was 1937. He was tops down there, until he broke an ankle. The following year he went up to Moline. Manager Truck Hanna sent him along, briefly, to Milwaukee, but he played most of the 1939 season for Tulsa, where he led the Texas League by 50 points. He came back to Los Angeles for the last month of the 1939 season and hit .452. That year he was named the most valuable minor league player.

His vibrant extravertism made him an immediate favorite on the coast. In addition, he could sock that ball. At a "day" in honor of the late Coast manager, Jack Lelivelt, staged in Seattle, he grabbed the microphone from the mastoid of ceremonies and told stories. At Novikoff Day, here, he hit a home run in the last inning, but his club lost by one run. He adjourned to the public address system and wheezed, "I wish there had'a been seven men on base when I busted that one." Then he sang his favorite number, "My Wild Irish Rose."

He likes to pick loud and pointless arguments with umps, to pep up a

He'll pose doing anything for a photographer, but he's no goof.

Alice Marble Beats Miss Hardwick Here

Crowd of 4,000 Cheers American Tennis Queen in Victory Over Game Britisher; Budge Turns Back Aging Tilden

By Anne Hagner

Tennis Queen Alice Marble, her right arm making a relentless drive against Mary Hardwick, took two straight sets from the little English star, 7—5, 8—6, to give 4,000 fans the treat of the season at Ritchie Coliseum last night.

Bill Tilden, still feeling the effects of his recent automobile accident, dropped two sets to Don Budge, 6—1, 6—4, but came back to team with Mary Hardwick and hand the favored Marble-Budge duo a 6—0, 8—6 licking.

Although Miss Marble's typically brilliant game lived up to expectations on every side, her British opponent was the real crowd-pleaser as she waged a game but losing battle.

After relinquishing a brief lead midway in the first set to Miss Marble's smashing talents, Miss Hardwick opened the second session in the same form that several nights ago gave her a single victory in 200-odd games with the American ace, with whom she has been touring the country all season. Miss Hardwick took a 3-0 lead in the opening minutes, but her streamlined adversary changed courts with a determined "fun's fun but enough's enough." The tide immediately changed and Miss Marble took two games, settling into her usual do-or-die stride.

Game Briton Rallies

Then the game Britisher, obviously tiring under the rapid fire, rallied for two games, finally bringing the score to 5-all. Greatest applause of the evening came forth when Miss Hardwick unearthed a powerful forearm smash to take the next point, but from then on, it was strictly a Marble evening. The American's long, spectacular shots raised the score to 6—all, 7—6, and ultimately to 8—6, as Miss Hardwick made a pair of double faults in the closing seconds of play.

When Miss Marble made up her mind to turn on steam, there was no doubt as to the reason for her consistent string of victories during

Miami Golf Won, 7 and 6, By Betty Hicks

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 31.—Elizabeth Hicks, of Pasadena, Calif., turned a close contest into a rout today to defeat socialite Grace Amory of Palm Beach, 7 and 6, in the finals of the Miami Biltmore Women's golf tournament.

Miss Hicks fashioned a par round in the afternoon out of long, smashing drives—the wonder of the tournament—and a short game that always matched and frequently exceeded the best Miss Amory could muster.

The dimunitive Californian got off to a bad start that left her all even at the end of the eighteenth with Miss Amory, who had been consistently ahead during the morning round.

In quick succession, as the final 18 started, Miss Hicks picked up five holes out of nine, and easily polished off the match on the thirtieth.

Her superb mastery of the course provided the spark that had been lacking due to the absence of Patty Berg, Minneapolis redhead, who won the tournament for five years and then turned pro.

Orioles Snap Eagle String, Winning, 4-3

Staunch Defense Halts Washington Inquest of 13th Unbeaten Match

By Jack Munhall

Their shooting subnormal against as effective a defense as has been seen at Riverside Stadium all season, the Washington Eagles last night lost their first match since January 7 as the defending champion Baltimore Orioles took a 3-0 lead and hung on in a dizzy finish to win, 4-3.

Ending the Eagles' spectacular streak at 12 undefeated games—including a tie—the persistent Orioles crept to within three points of the Eastern Amateur League lead and extended their advantage in the Boardwalk Cup series to two full games.

A throng of 3,414 paying patrons, including a contingent of 700 from Baltimore, watched the close-checking Orioles score twice in the first period and once each in the two succeeding sessions deal Washington only its third setback of the season at home. Atlantic City and Boston are the two other clubs to beat the Eagles here.

Penalties Predominate

Washington lost, but in defeat the Eagles displayed the courage and determination that has marked their play all season and kept the result beclouded until the final whistle sounded with a Baltimore player, George Grigor, writhing on the ice behind the Washington goal where he had been hurt seconds before.

Penalties played a prominent role in deciding one of the most gruelling matches in months, but that is no alibi for the Eagles since they appeared to get at least an even break in this respect. However, twice in the final period, when the seconds were so precious, Washington was robbed of a man through penalties and instead of being able to take the attack they were placed on the defensive.

Sloppy on attack, the Eagles fell behind in the opening period for the first time in several matches as Baltimore, playing aggressively, twice sent the puck spinning through Goalie Hemming.

Washington wasted a good opportunity midway of the period when for 2 minutes they outnumbered the Orioles, six players to five, and still couldn't come close to a tally.

Carl Piche registered the first Baltimore point, at 9:07, on an easy, lofted shot, which caught Hemming by surprise as his vision of the puck was screened by McCurry who had blocked George Grigor just as the Orioles passed to Piche standing about 15 feet out and to the left of the cage. At 16:31 Jack Riley, who also was credited with an assist on the initial goal, made it 2-0 by slapping the disc into the net through a maze of players fight-

Joe Louis Receives Questionnaire For Army Service

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 31.—Joe Louis, the heavyweight boxing champion, revealed tonight that there's a very good possibility he may do his fighting for Uncle Sam's Army in the near future.

His draft number, he disclosed, is 378, "which ain't very high, is it?"

"I got my questionnaire and will send it in as soon as I get it filled out," he explained.

He would not say what status he would claim in submitting his reply.

Rhode Island Five Upset; Streak Ended

Temple Wins, 42-38, In Overtime; St. Joseph's Scores Over Butler, 47-43

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.—Temple shattered the 10-game basketball winning streak of previously undefeated Rhode Island State in a thrilling extra-period game before 10,763 at Convention Hall tonight. The score was 42-38.

The game was the feature of a double-header. St. Joseph's beat Butler, 47 to 43, in the opener.

Hailed as one of the highest-scoring teams in the Nation the New England team was blanketed in the first half. Temple rolled up a 20-2 lead and led at the half by 26-8.

State Rallies

Rhode Island staged a sensational rally in the second half, pulling up to 26-16, then to 27-23 and finally tying the score at 27-all as the crowd went wild.

Temple took the lead at 29-27, but the New Englanders promptly went out in front at 31-29. Then Temple tied it at 31-31 to force the game overtime.

In the extra five minutes Temple scored first and stayed ahead until the final gun. The Owls held a 42-36 edge before the Rams got their last field goal in the final seconds.

Stan Modzelewski, Rhode Island's high-scoring center, was held to 10 points on 4 field goals and 2 fouls. Howie Kahn, with 5 field goals and 2 fouls, scored 12 points for Temple, while Bob Applebee got 13 for the Rams.

Waner Picked Up By Brooklyn

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers today announced they had signed Paul Waner, veteran outfielder given his unconditional release by the Pittsburgh Pirates last December.

Waner, who patrolled the outer gardens for the Pirates for 14 years, led the National League in batting three years and in 1927 was voted the circuit's most valuable player.

Notre Dame Gridder Signs Baseball Contract

Detroit, Jan. 31 (AP).—John Joseph McHale, 19-year-old Notre Dame football player, gave up his future on the college gridiron today to take a chance on getting into the major leagues.

McHale, who played center as a sophomore at Notre Dame last fall, was signed to a contract with Beaumont of the Texas League, farm club for the Detroit Tigers.

Challenger Stopped By Right to Stomach

Bomber Puts On Finishing Touch With Left Hook as Foe Drops; Burman Given Great Ovation for Game Battle

By Jack Cuddy

United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Jan. 31.—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis ended the gallant attempt of Clarence (Red) Burman, of Baltimore, to dethrone him tonight by knocking out the challenger in the fifth round before 18,061 fans at Madison Square Garden.

Crowd Cheers Fallen Warrior

When Burman's handlers dragged him to the corner, the crowd gave him a thundering ovation because he had made one of the most determined efforts of any of the parade of Louis challengers.

Burman, disciple of Jack Dempsey, had the heart of a champion tonight, but not the equipment. That was evident in the first round, when the heavier, taller and rangier Brown Bomber landed the more damaging punches, although Burman forced the fighting.

Burman's knockout trip to the deck was the lone knockdown of the abbreviated bout which was scheduled for 15 rounds. However, in the third session, Louis slipped in Burman's corner, after missing a punch, and sprawled to the canvas, half through the ropes.

Champion Joe looked much better tonight than he did on December 16 at Boston when he kayoed Al McCoy. He was punching more accurately and seemed surer of himself.

Red Lacked the Punch

Burman used the Dempsey bob-and-weave tonight, while the old Manassa Mauler looked on from a ringside seat. But though Burman had Dempsey's technique, he lacked the Mauler's dynamite when he landed.

At the opening of every round, Burman tore after Louis—boring into the taller champion from his crouch. Bomber Joe seemed unimpressed by Burman's blows to the body, but at times when Red landed hooks to Joe's head, the champion was a bit flustered.

Burman fought desperately in the fourth but Louis won the session by a slight margin after subjecting

See LOUIS, Page 18, Column 5.

ROUND ONE

Louis waited in his own corner as Burman walked across the ring. In a half clinch, Burman threw two short overhand rights to the ear. Louis caught Burman near a neutral corner and shook him with right and left to the head. Burman crowded in and threw a hard left and a short overhand right to the head. Joe jabbed Red's nose twice with his left.

Burman hooked two lefts to the body as he backed Joe into his own corner. Louis fired a right to the face and a left to the body. Burman bounced two straight lefts off Joe's nose and swung a right to the ribs.

ROUND TWO

As Louis' handlers worked on him between rounds it was noted he had a very slight cut over his right eye. Burman swung an overhand right to the ear, but received a left to the body in return. Red crouched in close and fired two solid rights to Joe's face. Louis nailed Red with a slashing right uppercut. Louis bounced a right off the chin and took a left to the body in return.

Louis measured Burman against the ropes and threw both hands to the body. Louis nailed Burman with a left hook, but Red drove back fast and banged a right off Joe's jaw. Louis backed away and whacked Red with a right cross, and as Burman crowded in Louis pummeled him with both hands about the head.

Burman bounced a right off the face. Joe, in a half-clinch, threw left and right to the body. They traded rights to the head. Louis threw a one-two to the face and fired a right to the ear at the bell.

Louis' round.

ROUND THREE

Burman hooked a left to the jaw. In close, Red threw both hands at the body. Louis shook Red with a hard hook to the ear. Then Joe measured him with two smashing right crosses as Burman crowded in close. Burman bounced a hard hook off Joe's face and Louis slipped under the lower strand of the rope to one knee. He was up immediately and it was not a knockdown but a fall.

Louis caught Burman in midring and fired both hands to the head. Louis backed away and blasted with both hands to the head. Joe was just short with a right uppercut and Burman rushed in and connected with a solid left to the cheek.

They traded smashing rights to the face as Burman went into his crouch again at the bell.

Louis' round.

ROUND FOUR

Louis backed away from Red's rush and stabbed with his left. Burman leaped in with three hard lefts to the face that sent Joe backing away to his own corner. In close, they dug away at each other's body.

Louis smashed Red with a hard right

Sailor King, 7-to-1 Shot, Takes Hibiscus Purse at Hialeah

Royal Robes, The Favorite, Takes Place

Choppy Sea Barely Beaten Out, Places Third as Sailor King Wins by 3 Lengths

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Walter Jeffords' Sailor King fooled the talent here today when he easily defeated a half-dozen other 3-year-olds in the mile-and-a-furlong Hibiscus Purse. The colt had worked exceptionally well although beaten in recent races and his backers got odds of 7 to 1. The son of Boatswain covered the 9 furlongs in 1:50 flat, holding three lengths' advantage as he crossed the finish line.

J. E. Widener's Royal Robes went postward favorite. The filly barely earned the place, a head in front of Wheatley Stable's forward-running Choppy Sea. Moja, the second choice, was a dull fourth.

Sailor King is a Flamingo Stakes candidate. His impressive score today moves him up as a possible threat for the coming fixture.

Royal Robes, after breaking fifth, sprinted to the front under Don Meade, who urged the filly into a daylight lead over Choppy Sea. The latter failed to make up much ground on the pacemaker, but Charlie Durando had Sailor King waiting to strike back in third position. After turning into the stretch, the Sailor began to run. He easily passed the two in front and drew out as if much the best.

†Lost rider.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POLLY PRIM, $12.40, $5.30, $3.80; STARWEISTA, $3.30, $2.60; SWEEP SWINGER, $5.30.

POLLY PRIM, troubled and forced out in the opening quarter mile, finished determinedly when clear to win going away. STARWEISTA, quickest to begin, displayed the most speed, but continued to bear out in the early stages and continued gamely in the final drive to outlast SWEEP SWINGER. The latter, in close quarters after the start, came again when clear, but could not reach the leaders. WARLEE, away tardily, closed a big gap. ALL HEELS crossed his legs at start and unseated his rider.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:34. Off 2:34⅕. Winner, E. F. Whitaker's dk. b. g. (5), by Time Maker—Lady Rockingham. Trained by J. Hayes. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:25.

Two-doHar mutuels paid—ROCK MAKER, $7.10, $4.00, $3.00; KLEIG LIGHT, $4.10, $3.10; MOONFOLLY, $3.20.

ROCK MAKER, going in close pursuit of the leader, took command at the furlong pole, but was ridden out vigorously to hold KLEIG LIGHT safe. The latter began fast, displayed the most speed and held on stubbornly in the final furlong. MOONFOLLY, slow to get going, swung to the outside in the last 3 furlongs and finished strongest of all. GREENY stole through on the inside entering the stretch and finished gamely.

Daily Double, POLLY PRIM and ROCK MAKER, Paid $38.70

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:03. Off 3:03½. Winner, Tower Stable's br. g. CYNIC KING	(Cruickshank)	105	10	8	8h	8h	10½	11	11	29.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—YANTIS, $6.70, $3.90, $2.90; HONEY BOAT, $9.80, $6.60; NILON, $6.50.

YANTIS, away slowly, moved up fast while circling the field in the final half mile and shook off HONEY BOAT through the stretch. HONEY BOAT, quickest away, showed the most speed, but could not stave off the winner's challenge. NILON moved up with a bold challenge midway around the lower turn, but hung in the final drive. EARLY SETTLER, hard ridden from the start, could not better his position.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:34. Off 3:34½. Winner, A. C. Ernst's ch. g. (3), by Neddie—Sun Bijur. Trained by J. R. Skirvin. Value to winner, $950; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:25.

SILVER TOWER	(Briggs)	106	2	6	4½½	4½½	6½½	7	7h	13.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAILOR KING, $16.00, $6.40, $4.60; ROYAL ROBES, $3.50, 3.00; CHOPPY SEA, 5.50.

SAILOR KING, under steadying restraint until midway around the last turn, moved up on the outside with determination when placed to pressure and easily shook off ROYAL ROBES in the stretch run. ROYAL ROBES set a fast early pace while being rated, but then faltered in the stretch run, yet outlasted CHOPPY SEA. The latter, prominent all the way, held on stoutly at the end. MOJA had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:07. Off 5:08½. Winner, Miss E. Burch's b. m. (6), by Lucullite—Mabel A. Trained by H. Burch. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:52.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RICCADONNA, $9.90, $5.30, $4.40; IDA ROGERS, $6.50, 4.50; WEDDING MORN, $3.90.

RICCADONNA, rushed to the front rounding the first turn, then rated in front, bore out slightly entering the stretch, but always held her opposition safe. IDA ROGERS saved much ground and finished strongly, but could not improve her position. WEDDING MORN closed stoutly under strong hand ride. DARK MAY was weakly ridden.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:37. Off 5:38. Winner, R. A. Firestone's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUPREME CHANCE, $8.60, $4.20, $3.10; PRINCE DEREK, $3.60, $2.90; COUNT MORSE, $2.90.

SUPREME CHANCE went to the front at once, saved ground while setting good pace to stretch, came out in stretch run and just lasted under vigorous handling. PRINCE DEREK was allowed to race on own courage for half, responded willingly when placed to drive, came to inside of SUPREME CHANCE and barely failed to get up. COUNT MORSE was close up from start, but could not threaten seriously while under pressure and tired at close. ALLMAR was closest in pursuit of pacemaker to midstretch and weakened. CARAVEL'S head was sideways in stall when start came. LACKAWANNA refused.

New York Fight Board Approves Date Changes

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The New York State Athletic Commission today approved the shifting of dates for two fights at Madison Square Garden, one of them involving Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins and Lou Ambers, former titleholder, in a nontitle bout.

To give Ambers more time to recover from an ailing foot, his fight with Jenkins was set back one week to February 28. To fill their original February 21 date the light-heavyweight bout between Jimmy Webb, of Fort Worth, and Tommy Tucker, of New York, was moved up a week.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al:

They tell a story about the late Mars Cassidy, the starter and father of the man who sends them away here. He was plying his trade at a Kentucky track. One of the jockeys failed to get his horse to the barrier on time and Cassidy yelled to him, "If you don't get here on time I'm going to give you the meeting." The boy replied, "If you do, I'm going to give it right back to you. The men that got it now can't make any money." Eddie Johnson, son of Walter Johnson, will leave next week for his Gaithersburg home. He will report to the U. S. Army. Johnson owns Good Reception, a winner at the present meeting. Bob Swisher, agent for Conn McCreary, reports that the meeting's leading apprentice jockey will return to the saddle next week. McCreary injured his knee last Monday. King Ranch's Dispose arrived from Columbia, S. C., for his engagement in today's running of the Bahamas Handicap. Dispose is also nominated for the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes. Max Hirsch, head trainer for the Texas-owned stable, who is caring for the King Ranch horses now at Hialeah, shipped the colt to Willie Crump. Calumet Farm's Whirlaway, last year's leading money winning 2-year-old, is moving up to his engagement in the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes in nice fashion. Trainer Ben Jones sent his charge 6 furlongs yesterday morning in the fractions of :23 4-5, 48 1-5, 1:14 3-5, breezing. Joseph E. Widener's Raphael II, the French importation, expected to lend an international touch to the $50,000 added Widener, was sent over the mile route. The son of Rodosto breezed a slight 8 furlongs in 1:45. J. O. Keene's War Beauty, a McLennan Memorial and Widener possibility, turned in a good effort during the Hialeah training hours. The Man O'War filly reeled off 7 furlongs in the following fractions: 23.2-5, 47 2-5, 1:00, 1:13, 1:26 3-5 in a handy manner.

BILL.

First race—Albatross has performed in excellent style over this track and appears ready for another set of brackets in this company. Should overcome the inside post position, and I'm going to string along. Notes is commended by good works and has had a race. Plush is from the fit Greentree Stable string.

Second race—English Harry appears suited by conditions in this event. The 1½ miles seem right, and he should go well on the turf course. Ardour gets a good figure and belongs with these. Grand Duke could be the third one.

Third race—Boiled Shirt must carry 120 pounds in this sprint and will have Don Meade to do the booting. Looks like the best combination. Laatokka is good now and deserves consideration. Sari Omar gets light weight and may be close.

Fourth race—White Hope, a recent winner, appears capable of taking another purse in this field. Moves up a notch, but is fit as hands make horses. Bailiwick will be a threat despite the heavy assignment. Quaker Brass could surprise if taken off the reserve list.

Fifth race—Little Risk gets the call in this sprint. Needs only the right handling. Great Albert has plenty of speed, but Aerial Bomb may run him into the ground.

Sixth race—Battle Colors turned in a smart performance last out and looks like the right one in the bulky feature field. Has the speed to take the top, and any price will be a good one. Dispose and Count Domino for the place and show positions.

Seventh race—Brown Ben seems to have found a route that suits his purpose, and he will be a hard horse to beat. I'm going to take my chances with him. Grand Lama's last was a beaut. County Bond for the minor award.

Eighth race—Titilator likes the 1¼ miles and with proper handling will down company of this caliber. Miss B. B. is consistent and a dangerous factor. Close To may be third.

Best bet—Albatross.

Brewers Seek Additional Cage Player

The Washington Brewers, prepared to fight to a finish for the American Basketball League's second-half championship, are seeking the services of a ninth player.

Coach Mack Posnack long distanced this information from New York yesterday as he awaited the Brewers' game with the New York Jewels in the big town tomorrow night.

The Brewers, who have lost the services of Arthur Zahn for the season due to a rib injury, are dickering for an experienced American League player, but must sign the best available man in the shortest possible order.

"I feel we've a good chance for the pennant and a play-off with the Sphas if we can land another player," Posnack reasoned, "and I'm hot on the trail of a good man now.

"If we get by the Jewels Sunday night we definitely will rate a good chance for the second-half crown. I think we can do it."

The second-half schedule of the American Basketball League released yesterday revealed that the Brewers have five games scheduled on the road and seven for Riverside Stadium. There are three open dates for out-of-town points, two for Brooklyn and another for Philadelphia.

Coast Guardsmen Fly Here for Tonight's Bouts With C. U.

Columbus Opens Card At Turner's

Seasoned Citadel Team to Oppose Explorers; Cards Slight Favorites

Washington's college boxing front will take on a martial note tonight when the trainees from the United States Coast Guard Academy, at New London, Conn., and the cadets of The Citadel, at Charleston, S. C., put in appearances for dates with Catholic and Columbus Universities.

The Cardinals entertain the Coast Guard team at Brookland gymnasium. Columbus' match is scheduled for the newly enlarged Turner's Arena, Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest. Both fights begin at 8:15 p. m.

C. U., winner over Lock Haven Teachers in its opening date last Saturday, probably will go to the post a slight favorite over the New London guardsmen, but Columbus will be the underdog in its engagement with The Citadel.

Arrive by Plane

The Coast Guard team pulled into town in regal style yesterday. Nine fighters, a manager and four members of the coaching staff arrived on a Coast Guard amphibian plane piloted by Lieut. Charles Tighe, former Coast Guard Academy boxing captain.

There'll be a note of revenge about tonight's battles at C. U. The Guardsmen, who lost a disputed 4-3 decision to Maryland University two weeks ago, appeared to be thoroughly worked up about this event yesterday and are determined to take it out on Maryland's neighbor, the Cardinals.

Coach Eddie LaFond's team has been hindered all week by midyear examinations which cut short his practice sessions. Should the Coast Guard come through with an upset, it will be C. U.'s first defeat since 1938.

Trouble Ahead

C. U.'s two newcomers, Leo Houck and Leo Gaffney, who scored technical knockout victories in their debuts last week, will run into severe competition tonight.

Gaffney, a lightweight, will face John Natwig, the Coast Guard 135-pounder, undefeated in three matches this week. Natwig's the lad who defeated Maryland's Pat Quinn. Gaffney, however, is one of the "sensations" that LaFond somehow manages to unearth year after year.

Houck, son of Penn State's famous boxing coach, will face Jim McLaughlin, the 175-pounder, who figured in the fight which caused the Coast Guard to lodge a protest over the decision with the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association, of which it is a member.

Strang in Debut

Gerry Strang, C. U.'s captain and 165-pound representative, will make his first appearance of the season. LaFond's newest find, Bernard Cody, a heavyweight, will substitute for the ailing Jules Stanges and run right into the Coast Guard's "man mountain," Fred Goettel, 6-foot-4, 205-pounder.

Herbert Gaston, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will head a list of notables forming the "official party" at the Coast Guard bouts. The party includes Admiral R. R. Waische, commandant, United States Coast Guard station here; Admiral L. C. Covell, assistant commandant; Charles Schwarz, of the Treasury Department; Dr. Carl Michel, medical director, U. S. C. G.; Frank Rose, of the Treasury; Lieut. A. J. Hisford, aide to Admiral Covell, and Commander Ellis Reed-Hill, of the Coast Guard.

At Turner's arena Coach Jim McNamara will be tossing out an untried collection of boxing talent against the Carolinians. The Bulldogs of The Citadel present a seasoned lineup, and only Wednesday night they lost a close decision to Virginia Tech in Winston-Salem, N. C.

Taub as Explorer Star

The Cadets lost by one point because their featherweight was unable to make the weight.

McNamara's chief hopes lie on the shoulders of Lou Taub, featherweight, who'll fight Jack Foster, of The Citadel; Charley Cox and Red Doherty.

Cox, who fought last year as a 155-pounder, has moved up to the 165-pound class. He's been suffering with a slight attack of influenza all week and will be fighting under a severe handicap.

Doherty, a newcomer to the squad, will carry the load in the light-heavy division and probably will be favored over The Citadel's G. P. Joseph.

The Carolinians worked out yesterday at the Jewish Community Center but held only a light drill.

Followers of the Explorer boxing team, bedecked in their best-pressed tuxedos, will be permitted to give vent to their emotions tonight. The rule at C. U. which prohibits cheering while the bouts are in progress doesn't go for Columbus at Turner's Arena.

Alice Marble Shows Why She Rules the Feminine Tennis Roost

the current tour. Aroused to a battling mood, Miss Marble was unbeatable. To the tune of an enthusiastic fan's, "Pour it on, Alice!" she completely outmaneuvered Miss Hardwick, who nevertheless turned in some of the snappiest footwork of the evening.

His game considerably slowed down by a game leg, Bill Tilden dropped two straight sets to Donald Budge, 6—1, 6—4, after a tumble into the grandstand added to Tilden's difficulties in keeping up with his flashy redheaded adversary.

The men's portion of the match opened quietly as Big Bill's ageing legs gave out with no excess speed, taking the first game but relinquishing the next six. Budge continued his sweep early in the second set, but Tilden produced some glimpses of his oldtime form to annex sufficient points to keep young Donald on his toes. Budge ran the score to 5—2 and Tilden took the next two, but Budge's steady rallies gave him the final point for a 6—4 score.

What the match lacked in the spectacular it easily made up in the free-and-easy manner in which both players completely captivated the $4,672 worth of audience. Whimsy reigned on all sides as long-legged Bill traded friendly remarks with Budge.

Tilden's left leg, stiffened as the result of an auto accident several weeks ago, bothered him so that he limped noticeably as he ambled about the court. Friends were upset by his nose dive during the first set, but he waved aside all sympathy and was thus able to take home the spectator-interest in a hip pocket.

Budge, his youth accentuated by the advancing years of his competitor, played a nimble game in the singles, but was not extended until he and Miss Hardwick met Tilden and Miss Marble in the doubles match. Then, proving an exceptional combination, the Budge-Hardwick forces dominated the first set, 6—0, but had a tougher time marking up victory in the second, 8—6, as Queen Alice and Tilden stiffened their defense and made an amazing recovery, running the score up to 7—6 after trailing, 5—2, in the early stages.

Tilden, his leg causing him increasing trouble, finally jokingly handed his racket to a linesman and insisted that he momentarily take the place of the old master. The official obligingly banged a nice shot over the net to Budge and Tilden, sprawling in a ringside chair, indicated that he should continue playing. The byplay delighted the grandstands, but Tilden soon took over and finished the game.

Spiders Sink Maryland Five Easily, 38-17

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Jan. 31.—Holding the upper hand practically all the way, the University of Richmond swamped a group of visiting cage firemen from the University of Maryland tonight, 38 to 17, before a slim crowd in Millhiser Gymnasium.

The defeat was the Terps' seventh straight to a Southern Conference opponent.

Maryland grabbed the lead in the opening seconds but from then on it was easy sailing for the Spiders. Jack Woodward, Terp center, tapped the ball to Eddie Jarmoska and the latter dribbled in for a crip to give Maryland the only advantage it enjoyed all evening. A few seconds later Swede Erickson, of the Spiders, netted one from side-court to even matters. Richmond cracked down then from all directions and left the court at half-time with a 19 to 12 lead.

The Terps were unable to tally a point during the first 12 minutes of the second half, finally breaking the ice and adding 5 points to their first half total. Richmond, meanwhile, was slowly but surely doubling its pot.

Bruins Meet Title-Holding Globe-Trotters

Officials of the Washington Bruins, colored professional cage club, last night accepted the offer of Chris Huiswoud, local promoter, to meet the Harlem Globetrotters, world professional champions, in a game at Turner's Arena on March 4.

The crack colored outfit, which last year captured the $5,000 pro tournament at Chicago after defeating the Renaissance in the semi-finals, contracted with Huiswoud early last month to play in Washington on March 4, and in Baltimore on March 5. The Bruins, because of their splendid record to date, were selected by Huiswoud for both dates.

It will be the first time the Trotters have ever shown in this section, most of their time being spent in the Far West and on the Pacific Coast.

The Bruins will begin a campaign of preparation for the invasion of the title-holders Sunday when they tackle Dolly King, former Long Island University luminary, and his New York Blackbirds in the regular Sabbath afternoon arena attraction. King, whose praises have been sung far and wide by New York writers and syndicate columnists, will head a flashy outfit to the Capital in the hope of halting the six-game winning streak of the locals.

Kovacs Net Victor Over Mulloy

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., today broke a jinx of long standing to defeat Gardner Mulloy, of Coral Gables, in semifinals of the University of Miami Invitational Tennis Tournament.

Kovacs, whom Mulloy had beaten three times in previous meetings, was on top of his game today and had a smashing backhand that baffled Mulloy. Kovacs won 7—5, 7—5, 6—3.

Winner of three successive Florida titles this month, Kovacs will face the winner of the Bobby Riggs-Jack Kramer match in the finals Sunday. Riggs and Kramer meet tomorrow to determine the finalist.

Clash of Ice Mice And Rats Nets $128 For Mile-o'-Dimes

The widely heralded ice hockey match between the Riverside Ice Mice and the Casino-Coliseum Rink Rats lived up to expectations last night as a large portion of the crowd for the Eagles-Orioles game lingered to laugh good naturedly at the comparatively inexpert performance of the preliminary icemen.

However, a worthy cause profited to the extent of $128.66, which was the amount collected from the fans to be turned over to the Mile of Dimes.

By the way, the Rink Rats won, 3-2.

Bulla Shoots 66, Leads in Western Open

By the United Press

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 31.—Big Johnny Bulla, of Chicago, today shot a 66, five under par, to take the lead at the end of 18 holes of play in the $5,000 Western Open golf tournament.

Sinking putts from as far away as 32 feet and chipping accurately, Bulla carded five birdies as he toured the first nine holes of the Phoenix Country Club course with a 32. He made the back nine in 34.

Oliver Stroke Behind

One stroke behind at 67 was Ed Oliver, of Hornell, N. Y., who had bad luck on the eighteenth hole. With his ball 12 feet from the cup, Oliver attempted the putt that might have given him a 66, but the ball bounced into the cup and out.

It was Bulla's working of the irons that amazed the large gallery that followed the winter golf brigade around the course. He birdied the first, second, fourth, seventh and eighteenth holes, and never once went over par.

Close on Oliver's heels, and only two strokes in back of Bulla, was the danger trio of Byron Nelson, the P. G. A. champion; Ben Hogan, last year's leading money winner, and Emerick Kocsis, of Lake Orion, Mich., all with 68s.

Kocsis Is Drafted

Kocsis had no sooner completed his 18-hole round when he got a wire from his father in Michigan advising him he had been called up for the draft. Kocsis, however, said he would finish the 72 holes of the tournament.

With 69's were Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago; Denny Champagne, Grand Rapids, Mich.; John Geertsen, Salt Lake City, and Red Francis, Altoona, Pa.

The 70-stroke scores included Clayton Heafner, Linvolle, N. C.; Herman Barron, White Plains, N. Y.; Leon Pettigrew, New York; George Fazio, Philadelphia; Don Schumacher, Dallas, Tex.; W. A. Stackhouse, Mineral Wells, Tex., and Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.

The two pretourney favorites, Defending Champion Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, Tex., ad Sammy Snead, the Virginia mountaineer, had respective scores of 71 and 72, which just weren't good enough to keep up with the blistering pace.

Three amateurs carded par 71's. They were Bud Ward, Spokane, Wash.; John Barnum, Houston, Tex., and Harry Todd, Dallas, Tex.

The second 18 holes will be played tomorrow. The field then will be trimmed and the survivors will play the final 36 holes Sunday.

Regis School Five Routs Georgetown Prep Cagers, 61-43

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Jan. 31.—Paying little attention to defense, Regis School basketers tonight trampled basketers of Georgetown Prep, of Washington, D. C., by a 61-43 count at the local gym.

With Forward Connor, of Regis, turning a total of 29 points, the little Hoyas managed to stay in the running for a time, but sagged late in the game. Bob Barrett, forward, registered ten points for Prep.

A preliminary went to Regis junior varsity, 24 to 6, over the invaders.

Landon Prep Rallies, Beats Coolidge, 23-13

Clinging to a slim margin throughout most of the game, Landon Prep five yesterday put on a fourth-quarter splurge to beat Calvin Coolidge High, 23-13, in the suburban gym.

In taking their seventh victory against two losses this year, the Prepmen held leads of 7-4, 13-11 and 15-13 at the various quarters before tallying 8 points to none for Coolidge in the final 8 minutes.

Chuck Boteler, guard, stole point honors from his high-scoring mate, Paul Baker, with a total of 8 to Baker's 7. Meiklejohn was best for the losers, who suffered their fourth setback in seven games, with 5 points.

Hoppe Shoots Record Game In Cue Tourney

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Willie Hoppe played the record low game of the world's three-cushion billiards tournament tonight when he defeated Clarence Jackson, of Detroit, 50 to 8 in 26 innings. It was Hoppe's fourth successive victory.

The defending champion ran out in the twenty-sixth inning with a string of six, thus breaking the current tourney record of 27 innings held by Allen Hall, of Chicago. Hoppe, making a belated start in the tournament following an attack of flu and pneumonia, had a previous the low game of 32 innings.

The low game national record of 23 innings is held jointly by Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo.; and Jay Bozeman, of Vallejo, Calif.

Hoppe held a 25 to 6 lead over Jackson at intermission and ran out in nine more innings while allowing his opponent but 2 points.

Challedon's Dam Rescued From Blaze

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Jan. 31.—Ten valuable brood mares were led to safety today when fire swept one of the large frame barns on the Glade Valley estate of William L. Brann at Walkersville, near here. One of the horses removed from the blazing structure was Laura Gal, dam of Challedon, voted by turf experts "horse of the year" in 1939 and 1940.

Frank Grosche, manager of the farm for the Maryland sportsman, said the fire was started by defective wiring. He estimated loss at approximately $12,000, covered by insurance.

Firemen from Frederick and Walkersville pumped water from a nearby lake and succeeded in preventing a spread of the flames to adjoining barns. Less than 200 feet away is located the barn of Challenger II, sire of Challedon and purchased by Brann from the late Lord Dewar, of England, for $100,000 eight years ago.

Considerable farm machinery, hay and oats were destroyed.

Among the mares removed were Galet, Inchape Belle, Widdecombe, Dogana, Starry Pump, Peggy Mac and Lakar.

All the mares are in foal to Challenger, Grosche said.

Brann, who is in California, was notified of the fire, and rebuilding plans will await his return East after the Santa Anita Handicap, in which Challedon will race, on March 1.

Gonzaga High, St. John's Clash Tonight

The score may not be close, but St. John's and Gonzaga High basketball teams, as usual, may be expected to put on a rousing battle tonight when they come to grips for the first time this year at Tech gym. Play will start at 8 p. m.

If previous year's clashes are an indication, Tech's spacious cage quarters will be packed with the most rabid fans Washington can boast, and the issue won't be settled until the ball has come to rest after the final whistle.

Gonzaga Is Favorite

Going into the engagement which will have a bearing on the Catholic Prep title, Gonzaga appears an easy winner. It has won nine games and lost only three so far, while the Johnnies look back unhappily on 4 scattered victories in 15 games. St. John's main hope will be the uncanny ability of Coach Gene Augusterfer to build up for a particular game.

Leading Gonzaga's forces will be All-Metropolitan Bob Mulvihill, a brilliant ball handler and shooter. His mates will probably be Franny Counsilman, the team's top scorer; Bernie Nolan and Hart Cross, a pair of first-year men, and either Joe O'Lone, Buddy Rowzee or Bobby Lauck.

St. John's, without a standout scorer, must depend on the steady floor play and tallying of Dick Hathaway, George Hughes, Buddy Spiess, John Cooke, Chuck Dudley, Larry O'Brien and Paddy McCarthy.

Of equal importance to nearby Virginia schoolboy fans tonight will be a meeting of Washington-Lee High and George Washington High in Ballston at 8 p. m. The clubs have somewhat similar records to date and, taking into consideration their terrific rivalry, figure to put on one of the most even and interesting games of the year.

Supporting these engagements today will be a Tech-Devitt affair at the former's gym, Western's invasion of College Park to face the Maryland frosh and the annual tangle between Virginia Episcopal and Episcopal in Alexandria. All start at 3:30.

Regal, Marlboro Meet for Title

Regal Clothiers and Marlboro, only remaining teams in the elimination for the Washington and Suburban Soccer League Cup, come together tomorrow at Gonzaga Field with the championship at stake. Game time will be 2:30.

The last meeting of the teams resulted in a 1-1 deadlock, the game being stopped by League President Buck Davidson because of excess roughness. A close and rugged battle is anticipated. Abbie Clark, well-known official, will referee.

Haight Goes South

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss:

Please stop sending me telegrams demanding more letters in my flashy verse style. I have written 15 of them so far, but I've decided to wait until I get home and put them in a book. Now, don't think I'm unappreciative. I'll admit that your offer of a $3,000 bonus is generous enough, but I believe it will be a waste of talent to have these masterpieces printed in a daily paper. Just think how I would feel if I came home, after wearing my fingers to the bone, and found some of the best works of my career in our icebox wrapped around a herring. And suppose some little boy made a play ship and used my letter for a sail and then stood on the shore and cried as it drifted over the horizon. I'd feel bad, too, if that little ship hit a reef and had a hole knocked in the bottom and then the wind died down and the little ship became becalmed—hold everything, Boss. It is getting so that every time I sit at the typewriter lately I can't help thinking of rhymes. Funny thing, but I never knew I had any talent that way before. But then I never drank zombies regularly before either. Boss, I pulled this letter right out of the typewriter and wrote a verse about that little boy's boat. It's a honey, Boss. Sorry I can't let you have all of it here. But I will give you a sneak preview and after you read it I know you will want to buy the book when it comes out. Well, the boat has a hole in the bottom and there's no wind, so my verse reads:

If such a thing should come to be
As that litle ship's plight at sea
I know that I could contrive a plan
To bring it safely back to land
That picture of mine, all chin and cheek
Would swell right up and stop the leak
And from the letter "I" I'd make an oar
And paddle that little ship back to shore.

HAIGHT

If you intend putting this letter in the paper, Boss, I would appreciate if you will put a copyright line on the verse part. With all this ASCAP stuff, somebody might take this part out in the back yard and air it.

Well, Boss, I had intended to lay low (despite my diet, I could not lay low if I tried) about this, but although you have got me down here in this dreadful place, I'm going to be on the up and up with you. You know that verse I wrote about Miami fishing—well, I received an offer for the exclusive rights to it. I had intended to make a deal myself, but I wrote it for you and I have decided that you might want to do the negotiating yourself. I don't know what the fellow's name is because I lost his letter, but he works for the W. E. Exterminator Co. You just dial R-A-T 812 and hang up if Art Brown answers.

I guess you think I'm getting too commercial, Boss. I know it will be sad for yo uto sell that verse after you have framed it and hung it up on the wall, but I'm coming back to Washington and I'm going to be faced with a cold, cold summer. Don't think for a minute that I'm going to let you be without a fish poem, Boss. Why, even as I write this letter I'm thinking of another one. In fact I've got it right now:

Fishy, fishy in the brook
Daddy catch him on the hook
Mama fry him in the pan
Baby eat him like a man.

Isn't it wonderful, Boss. They just pop out—and original, too. Hold your hat, Boss, here we go again:

Zombie, zombie on the bar
Daddy drink at like a Tar
Mama hit him like a man
Now baby luaghs at Daddy's pan.

I can't help it, boss. I'm trying to end this thing, buit it looks like I'll have to do it in verse:

I've got to go to the track
(Please don't give me the sack)
I've a tip on a race (Hope I'm not late)
Always Your Ace.

MIAMI HAIGHT.

John Kimbrough Wants More Cash For Pro Services

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 31.—John Kimbrough, the All-American fullback from Texas A. and M., came within $11,500 cash money of signing a contract today to play football with the New York professional Yankees next season.

That was the figure that separated John From Douglas Hertz, president of the Yankees, after the latest of their conferences. Kimbrough said he would fly back up here in about a month to argue some more.

Hertz offered to write Kimbrough a check for $3,500 right now and to guarantee him an additional $34,000 for his exclusive services for one year. He said this probably would include making a couple of movie shorts.

Kimbrough, on the other hand, said he preferred an advance payment of $15,000. He wants to buy a ranch as soon as he is graduated in June, and it apparently is a good-sized ranch he has in mind.

It was a disappointing day for Hertz all around. He received a letter from Tommy Harmon, Michigan's All-American halfback, saying he definitely had decided upon a career in radio and would not play professional football. Hertz had offered Harmon $17,500 for one year, $12,500 of it for playing football.

Hoya Frosh, Varsity Relay Teams to Run

Maryland Enters Only Sprint Medley; Both Schools to Compete At Seton Hall Monday

Georgetown's track team makes its second indoor start and Maryland's runners their debut tonight in the fast Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden and then move over to Seton Hall, N. J., for a meet on Monday night.

The Hoyas will be heavily represented in the Millrose affair with varsity and freshman 1-mile relay teams and two freshman stars in special events. Maryland will enter only one Millrose race, the sprint medley. At Seton Hall Georgetown will race in the varsity 1-mile and 2-mile relays, as national shotput champion Al Blozis makes his 1941 debut. Earl Audet, Georgetown's promising freshman weight thrower, may be Blozis' leading rival in the shotput. Maryland will also run the 2-mile competition.

Pitted against strong opposition, notably N. Y. U., Manhattan, Indiana, Fordham and Ohio State, none of the local relay teams has more than an outside chance of scoring a victory.

N. Y. U. Strong Favorites

Georgetown's 1-milers, victorious in their only start of the season in the time of 3:25.6 at Boston, will race against N. Y. U., winner of three straight, and Pittsburgh at the Millrose games. The Hoya team will be composed of Pete McAtee, a sophomore; Charley Williams and Ken Lyden, juniors, and Mort Alnwick, senior, running in that order.

The Violets, with Lester MacMitchell handling the anchor assignment, will be strong favorites.

Maryland's sprint medley team of Bob Condon, 440; Bob Montgomery, 220; Randall Cronin, 880, and Tommy Fields, miler, will be up against some of the best teams in the country, Manhattan, Indiana and Ohio State. The Terps will do well to finish third ahead of the Buckeyes. Indiana, with Ray Cochran, the Big Ten indoor and outdoor miler, in man, and Campbell Kane, the Big Ten indoor nad outdoor miler, in the mile anchor spot, is expecting opposition from Manhattan's Tom Cahill, Joe Lynch, Johnny Quigley and Andy Neidnig.

Short, Doolan to Compete

Hugh Short, a crack half-miler from New Jersey, and Jack Doolan, the former national scholastic sprint champion, will be Georgetown's special events performers at New York. Short will run in the invitation 300-yard race against Hal Davis, the 20-year-old Salinas (Calif.) Junior College flash, who won the National Senior A. A. U. 100-meter and 200-meter championships last summer, and Barney Ewell, the Penn State Negro star. Doolan will compete in a series of sprints—50, 60 and 70 yards—against Davis and Ewell at New York and again at Seton Hall. Not yet in condition, Doolan is not counted on to more than extend his rivals.

The Hoya freshman 1-mile relay team, very strong on paper, will be made up of Al Rogers, Paul James, Bill Mallory, and Louis Collado, going off in that order. Collado, at Seton Hall Prep last year was the outstanding schoolboy half-miler in the East and perhaps in the country.

Kehoe Entered

The personnel of the Georgetown and Maryland 2-mile teams at Seton Hall will be, for the Hoyas, Vincent Carnevale, Vincent Fish and Williams and Lyden, and for the Terps, Condon, Tom Devlin, Cronin and Fields, in their respective orders.

Jim Kehoe, the former Maryland star representing Washington A. A. will be in the spotlight at the Millrose games and again at Seton Hall as he renews his feud with Campbell Kane, who has beaten him in four straight races. Kehoe will run against Kane in the half-mile at New York and in the 1,000 yards at Seton Hall.

Unbeaten Md. Boxers Face Virginia U.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 31.—Varsity and freshmen boxing teams of the University of Virginia and the University of Maryland will clash in 16 bouts here tomorrow before one of the largest crowds of the indoor season.

An attendance of around 2,000 is in prospect for the afternoon freshman meet, starting at 3:30, and nearly 5,000 more are expected to jam Memorial Gymnasium for tomorrow night's varsity feature, which will get under way at 8 o'clock.

Maryland comes up to the Virginia meet undefeated, having won from South Carolina and the Coast Guard Academy, while Virginia punched out a victory over Virginia Tech and lost to North Carolina.

The opening 120-pound bout on the varsity program will send Virginia's undefeated Joe Block against Judson Lincoln, Maryland sophomore.

John Carruth is Coach Al York's choice to replace Peter Berkey, injured regular, in the 155-pound weight for Virginia. His Maryland opponent will be Fred Bach or Bob Miller, both sophomores.

In what looms as one of the feature bouts of the evening, Fenton Somerville, Virginia captain, will collide with George Pyles, undefeated Old Liner, in the 165-pound scrap.

Named for the heavyweight assignments are Guerard Howkins, Virginia senior in his first season as a regular, and Leonard Rodman, undefeated Maryland sophomore.

PAIRINGS FOR OTHER VARSITY BOUTS

Table Tennis Stars Compete Here Today

All of the East's best table tennis players and 7 of the country's top 10 are included in a crack field of 52 entrants which will start in the eighth annual Eastern tournament at 1 o'clock this afternoon in Heurich gym.

When officials made the draw last night it was found that no less than six States and a foreign country were represented in the field topped by National Champion Lou Pagliaro and five of his fellow townsmen from New York City.

With the big town presenting six nationally ranking players, it became impossible for any other city to break into the seeded list, and the two Hungarian aces, Laszlo Bellak and Tibor Hazi, were the only non-New Yorkers accorded a rating.

The seedings, as announced, are No. 1, Pagliaro; No. 2, Ed Pinner; No. 3, Sol Schiff; No. 4, Charles Schmidt; No. 5, Bernard Grimes, and No. 6, Sy Sussman. Bellak and Hazi were seeded 1-2 in a foreign grouping.

Together, Washington and New York supplied two-thirds of the 52 entrants with the Capital's 22 nearly doubling Manhattan's representation. Stanley Fields, the District champion and outstanding threat, was drawn in Pagliaro's half of the draw, but must get by such formidable threats as Schmidt and Hazi if he would meet Pagliaro in the semifinals.

At least one Washington entry is slated to meet Bellak, former world's champion, in a second-round match, as Jules Bernard and John Ranstead, both local players, are first-round opponents of a match of which the winner is paired with Bellak.

Round-by-Round Of Louis Victory Over Red Burman

cross, but it seemed to have no effect on the Baltimort belter. Another right drew blood from Red's nose. In close, they mauled each other about the body. Louis straightened Burman up with right uppercuts. Louis bounced a crashing one-two off Red's chin, but still Burman crowded in.

ROUND FIVE

Imirie's 159 Tops Palace Bowling

Imirie, Royal Tavern, led the Chevy Chase Commercial league at the Ice Palace with a high game of 159 as Gibson, Griffin's Grill, counted 402 to take the top set and pace his team to a 1,828 high team set.

ARCADIA

Naomi Farrall, Paul's Auto Shop, and Lucille Young, Arcade Pontiac, were the leaders in the Ladies' Independent play at Arcadia, the former getting high game of 143, while Mrs. Young, who leads the league in high average, upped it last night with top set of 377. Kidwell's Senators had the best team game with 557, but Mrs. Young's nice set helped her Arcade Pontiac girls also win set with 1,570.

QUEEN PIN

Cochrilla, St. Anthony's No. 2, and Mascetti, St. Peter's No. 2, divided individual honors in the Section "G" meet of the Washington Catholic League at Queen Pin, the former rolling a 141 game, as 354 sticks won the set for the latter.

PENN RECREATION

Francis, Standard, and Bean, LeRoy Mark, led the Insurance League at Penn Recreation with the former rolling high game of 152, while the latter had a 372 count for the top set. Hooper & Holmes was best for team game with 568, as Standard took the set with a 1,627 pinfall.

COLUMBIA

Eddie Goldberg's Clarendon Bowling Center junior team will meet the Columbia Juniors at the latter alleys this afternoon at 1:30 in a special team match. Tomorrow night at 7 o'clock the Clarendon boys will meet Ned Warner's Del Ray Juniors at Clarendon in a special three-game match.

Gonzaga Bantams Defeat Kendall

After being forced into an overtime in its third straight game yesterday, Gonzaga High bantam basketers tripped Kendall School for the Deaf, 32-30. Though behind by 24-12 at intermission, the Purple youngsters came back fast to win on a looping floor shot by Hickson.

Wilson Beats Gallaudet Five Again, 46-33

Jumping into an early lead which was never seriously challenged, the Wilson Teachers College five defeated Galludet, 46 to 33, last night on the Eastern High court. This was the Teachers' second victory of the season over the Kendall Greeners, having taken an earlier game on the Galludet floor, 57 to 50.

Ray Battaglini, rangy Wilson forward, was the individual scoring star, hitting the hoops for five field goals and quartet of free tosses for an aggregate of 14 points. He was closely pushed for honors by his teammate, Center Erne Cole, who accounted for 13 points. Hal Ifshen, the big gun of the Teachers' attack, made his first appearance in two weeks after an illness and collected four field goals during the approximate half of the game that he played.

Teachers Get Jump

The taller Wilson cagers had things under control from the opening tip-off and ran up a 21-12 lead in the first quarter, which was stretched to 30-20 at the midway mark. Despite the fact they missed numerous scoring opportunities through reckless shooting, the victors were able to stifle the aggressive efforts of Blair Smith's proteges and limited little Carmen Ludovico, Gallaudet's high-point man, to ten points. Gallaudet played a heads-up floor game and time and again stemmed Wilson surges that threatened a scoring rout. In the final quarter, Gallaudet held the winners to a single field goal and a pair of foul shots. The principal figure in this defensive work was stocky Charley Duick, Blue forward, who won the plaudits of some 400 spectators before he was forced from the game in the fourth period via the foul route.

In a preliminary, the Eastern High Jayvees swamped the Calvin Coolidge juniors, 32 to 9.

Red kept after the champion in the fifth, but was rocked repeatedly with hooks and uppercuts to the face. As they went into the ropes, Louis smashed Red with a hard right to the belly. Red wilted and got the final left hook on the chin as he went down. He fell half through the ropes, with the lower strand supporting his body as his knees rested on the canvas on one side and his face and arms on the canvas on the other side.

Louis had a weight advantage of 14½ pounds, scaling 202½ to Burman's 188. This was the heaviest the Bomber has weighed for a title defense.

Joe's Hardest Blow

In the dressing room, Louis praised the challenger for his game bid. He said: "Burman's the first man I fought since Galento who really went after me. I guess that knockout punch was the hardest body blow I ever threw. I pulled him into it. It's the first time I ever knocked anybody out with a body punch."

Joe said he suffered the gash below his eye when butted, coming into a clinch.

Burman explained: "He never really hurt me until whatever happened in that fifth round. I ran him all over the ring, didn't I? Give me a few more fights and then a return with Louis and I'll be champion. This was the first good fight I've had in two years, and you can't get into shape fighting bums. Why don't they give me a crack at Billy Conn, now?"

Results of Preliminaries

Norman Rubio, 143, Albany, N. Y., outpointed Aaron Smith, 147½, Los Angeles (6).

Eagles Defeated By Orioles, 4 to 3

ing for the puck before the Washington goal. As was the case on the first goal, this shot too was screened from Hemming.

The Orioles, outskating and outfighting the Eagles, probably would have taken a greater lead had not several of their promising three-man sorties been broken up by Burrage and Knipfel, playing defense for Washington.

After the Orioles had threatened to make a runaway of the match by running their advantage to 3-0, the Eagles came to life late in the second period and put themselves back into the game with a pair of tallies.

Webster chalked up Baltimore's third counter at 7:19 on a strange play in which Goalie Hemming left the Washington nets to try to stop a solo rush by Vitarelli who had stolen the puck from two Eagles.

The Eagles kept plugging, however, and capitalizing on another penalty they broke the ice, at 14:28, when Pranschke knocked in a long one after Dewey and Burrage had worked the puck into the Orioles' defensive zone. Then at 17:06, Burns added to his league scoring lead with a nicely executed goal on which he grabbed the puck from an enemy and with the same motion arched a shot from a bad angle.

Play was very rough, with near-fights cropping up all over the ice between various players. Baltimore's Vitarelli usually was one of the principals.

Final Shots Fail

Baltimore increased its lead to 4-2 early in the last stanza as penalties, coupled with the stalwart Orioles' defense, shackled the desperately trying Eagles, who were all out in a dying effort to extend their streak.

Just four minutes before the finish Washington counted its third goal and from then on it was a dog fight as tempers tightened and the teams fought frantically. Goalie Ceryance continued his fine play for the Orioles, contributing several timely saves, notably off shots by Dewey, Pranchke and Knipfel.

Dewey, who counted Washington's fourth goal, at 16:10, had a clear shot a few seconds later after taking a pass from Courteau, but Ceryance flung his chest into the puck and it glanced harmlessly off.

PRECAMPAIGN TEA—The National Symphony Orchestra's campaign committee gave last-minute instructions to volunteer workers at the precampaign tea yesterday in the Carlton Hotel. Among those attending were Mrs. William B. Kean (left) and Mrs. William F. Lee, of the Army committee, who were served by Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, chairman in charge of tea. The drive for $107,600 as a maintaining fund for the orchestra's 1941-1942 season will open Monday and continue through February 13

Don't Sacrifice Child Welfare, Parley Warns

Child welfare and education must not be sacrificed in the emergency program for defense, members of an American Legion Child Welfare Conference were warned here yesterday.

Representatives of the child welfare division of the legion and its affiliated organizations for Area B in session at the Washington Hotel, reported evidence in their States and departments of a tendency to cut welfare and education services in favor of emergency measures.

"If we do not care for the children, whatever we do in defense will be useless," declared Emma C. Puschber, director of the American Legion national child welfare division since 1925.

The importance of coordinated effort being carried on by the American Legion, the auxiliary, 40 and 8, and 8 and 40, its affiliated organization, was emphasized in a morning round table discussion.

Coordinate Efforts

Coordination of efforts with those of other agencies was stressed as the next step in efficient work to tie in with defense.

E. W. Luther, past commander of the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion, and now with the national headquarters of the Selective Service System, told members of the conference the youth of America was being found in better condition now than in 1917 and 1918, although the examinations today were more rigid.

Gen. James A. Drain, representing Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, urged all those interested in child welfare to see that gains already made were held.

Delinquency Discussion

The Rev. Frederick J. Halloran, of Trenton, N. J., advisory member of the National Child Welfare Executive Committee, discussed "The Prevention and Treatment of Juvenile Delinquency," pointing out that the problem had to be dealt with from the standpoint of the home influence which in a majority of cases was directly responsible for the child's difficulty. The broken home and lack of religious training are two prime factors in the problem, he said.

Mrs. P. J. Dixon, national child welfare chairman of the American Legion Auxiliary, likewise pointed to the need for aiding the whole family in an effort to aid the child.

The conference continues today.

Geography Group Hears Mrs. Singer Lecture on Africa

The border territory between Kenya and Ethiopia, scene of recent British-Italian battle, and regions in French Africa through which Gen. de Gaulle's forces marched early this week to attack the Italian outpost at Murzuk in southern Libya, were shown to members of the National Geographic Society last night in an illustrated lecture in Constitution Hall.

Mrs. A. Hamilton Singer, the first woman to drive alone across Africa from Capetown to the Mediterranean, told how her small boat, from which she was photographing a river of lava as it poured from Mount Nyamlagira into Lake Kivu in the Belgian Congo, was sucked close to the glowing lips of the molten stream. To film the erupting crater of Mount Nyamlagira and the rushing orange streams of lava, Mrs. Singer climbed to the lip of the volcano after native guides refused to approach the fiery caldron.

Freighter Hits Oregon Bridge

Portland, Oreg., Jan. 1 (U.P.).—The 5,500-ton freighter Coast Miller crashed against the Burnside Bridge over the Willamette River tonight, shearing off both masts, smashing the stock and damaging the ship's deck.

There were no casualties.

The Coast Miller was moving upstream at the time. W. A. Wren, bridge operator, said he attempted to raise the bridge as the ship approached, but the machinery locked.

Commissioners Appoint Two To West Point

The names of two Washington boys yesterday were sent to the War Department as the District Commissioners' choice for appointment to the West Point Military Academy. They still have to hurdle the academy's validating examinations and a physical test.

SNOW

Nominated by the city fathers are Beverly C. Snow, jr., son of Maj. Beverly C. Snow, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, and Paul Bradshaw, jr., nephew of Col. Aaron Bradshaw, U. S. A., and of Miss May P. Bradshak, principal of Roosevelt High School. Both are 17 years old.

Alternates named for the successful candidates are James B. Clements, 1357 Maryland Avenue Northeast, and Edward S. Stahl, 603 Powhatan Place Northwest.

BRADSHAW

Snow, who resides at 4400 P Street Northwest, is a graduate of the Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H.

Bradshaw resides at 901 C Street Northeast, but was born in Portland, Oreg., April 27, 1923.

D.C. Auto Law Change Asked Of Congress

Amendment of the Motorists' Financial Responsibility Act to apply to cases of reckless driving in which personal injury occurs is one of four legislative proposals made to Congress yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Should the amendment be adopted, drivers convicted of reckless driving after a personal injury would be required to obtain liability insurance before being permitted to operate an automobile again.

Commissioner John Russell Young wrote that the broadening of the act was merited by the large number of injuries from reckless driving.

Under the insurance statute, enacted in 1935, motorists who fail to obtain liability insurance or deposit a $11,000 bond after conviction of the offense cited will have their driving permits suspended.

The Commissioners asked that a loophole in the Taxicab Insurance Act be plugged by the adoption of an amendment which would give the superintendent of insurance power to promulgate regulations governing the law. Regulations previously promulgated were invalidated by the Court of Appeals in April, 1939.

Amendment of the Union Station Act to permit the opening of streets across other than main railroad lines without providing grade separations also was requested. The Commissioners would have to determine that the span is not necessary for public safety.

A fourth bill is designed to eliminate practices of master plumbers letting others use their licenses. The legislation was requested by the District plumbing inspector's office.

Loaded Nazi Ship Leaves Chilean Port

Talcahuano, Chile, Jan. 31 (AP).—The 7,132-ton German freighter Portland, laden with 10,000 tons of oil, cereals and minerals, sailed today for an unannounced destination after having lain in Chilean waters since soon after the outbreak of war.

Maritime circles believed the Portland would head for Japan in an attempt to evade the British blockade.

Refugees Aid U. S. Culture, Duggan Says

The present hegira of scholars from Europe westward may bring a "new renaissance in the Western Hemisphere," Stephen Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education, told the American Council of Learned Societies at a dinner at the Washington Hotel last night.

He compared the present exodus of learned men from Nazi-dominated countries with the movement westward of Greek scholars after the fall of Constantinople. That That hegira, he pointed out, was followed by the renaissance in Europe.

As chairman of the Emergency Committee for Foreign Scholars, Dr. Duggan reported that 240 scholars have been brought to the United States from countries under Nazi rule, particularly Germany. About half of these, he said, have been absorbed by institutions of learning and have permanent places in this country. Most of them, he added, have made "most happy adjustments" with their new environments, though "few were misfits."

Mature Men Placed

Dr. Duggan said his committee has, in practically all cases, found places for mature men, rather than young men who might displace instructors and assistant professors on American faculties. He said a plan to establish research centers for those who have not been placed with universities is under way.

Dr. Alvin Johnson, director of the School of Social Research, which has brought over a number of refugee scholars, said their addition to American faculties should improve academic methods.

"In the academic life," he said, "they haven't learned that competition is the life of trade. These people will stir things up. All the development of the future depends on the quick movement of life and we have become much more alive by the influence of these people we have brought in."

A discussion on the problems of refugee scholars in the United States followed the two talks.

Famous Scientists Attend

Franz Boaz, anthropologist, of Columbia University; W. F. G. Swann, the Franklin Institute's cosmic ray expert; Frederic A. Ogg, University of Wisconsin political scientist, and other famous figures in science are attending the council's annual meeting.

The final discussions will be held this morning at the Washington Hotel, with adjournment scheduled for 1 p. m.

Official delegate from the American Society of International Law is Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, who attended all sessions yesterday. Reports were presented by committee chairmen reviewing 1940 progress in such studies as Oriental languages, music, history of religions and educational trends.

Lutherans Seek Institutions' Aid In Refugee Work

Cooperation of Lutheran colleges and theological seminaries in relocating refugee Lutheran students and teachers was recommended yesterday, as the Board of Education of the United Lutheran Church closed its annual meeting.

Convening at the Lafayette Hotel, the board members — including heads of about 20 Lutheran institutions— also recommended that a survey of Lutheran colleges and seminaries be started.

According to Dr. Gould J. Wickey, of this city, executive secretary of the board, the survey will "look toward a more effective educational program, with possible expansion and merger of some institutions."

H. R. Gold, Williamsport, Pa., pastor, was reelected as board president on Thursday. Also named were Dr. F. R. Fretz, of Easton, Pa., vice president; Dr. Wickey, reelected executive secretary, and Thomas P. Hickman, also of this city, treasurer. Chosen as additional members of the board were Dr. Raymond J. Seegar, of Washington; Dr. F. R. Knubel, son of Dr. F. H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church, and Dr. J. N. Deaton, of Baltimore.

Telephone Net Up $41,879 During Month

Net income of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. totaled $190,597 in December, a gain of $41,879 as compared with the same 1939 month.

For the 12 months of 1940, net income was $1,862,997, against $1,805,543, or an increase of $57,454 over the previous year, according to the annual report released yesterday by General Manager Charles A. Robinson.

Operating revenues for December totaled $1,209,399, against $1,075,115 a year ago. Operating expenses were $841,593, as compared with $756,746 in December, 1939.

For 1940, operating revenues totaled $13,316,654, or 9.1 per cent higher than the $12,205,834 in 1939. Operating expenses for the past year totaled $9,440,786, against $8,651,281 in the previous year.

Taxes in December amounted to $122,624, a decrease of $1,088 from December, 1939. For the 12 months of 1940, taxes amounted to $1,419,653, which is $167,985 more than for the same period in 1939, an increase of 13.42 per cent.

There were 275,326 telephones in service at the end of December, which is an increase of 2,774 telephones over the previous month. Telephone users made 34,832,000 calls during the month, or 3,441,000 more than in December, 1939.

Safeway Nets $4,786,652

Preliminary report of Safeway Stores, Inc., for the year ended December 31, 1940, shows net profit of $4,786,652, after interest, depreciation and income taxes, equal after $951,444 of regular preferred dividends to $4.76 per share on 805,284 average common shares outstanding during the year.

This compares with an independently audited net profit of $6,268,360 in 1939, the equivalent of $6.61 a share on 806,559 average common shares outstanding, after allowing for regular preferred dividends of $936,076. On the basis of these preliminary figures, the company will not be subject to Federal excess profits tax for the year 1940, the report stated.

D. C. Realtor Elected

Waverly Taylor, Washington real estate man, has been elected a vice president of the Home Builders Institute of America, an affiliation of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The group was set up Thursday at a session in New Orleans to act as a unified representative of home builders seeking legislative aid, to deal with labor groups, manufacturers and to elevate standards of the profession. David D. Bohannon, San Francisco, was elected president.

Cotton Leads Brisk Rise in Commodities

By the Associated Press

Major commodities for future delivery snapped out of the week's decline with a brisk rally yesterday.

At New York, cotton regained 20 to 40 cents a bale of recent losses. Demand stemmed from a resumption of active trade in cotton textiles.

Wool tops gained 1' to 1½ cents a pound, still under the influence of prospective huge Government purchases of woolen goods.

Other staples marked up included straits tin, coffee, cottonseed oil, sugar, silk and copper. Rubber moved against the trend while zinc was irregular.

Chief exceptions to the main forward shift were wheat and corn at Chicago. Wheat closed unchanged to ¾ cent a bushel lower, with optimistic reports on the winter crop the dominant factor. Corn was off ¼ to ⅜ of a cent.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot cash staples, based on 1926 as 100, declined to 77.69 from 78.12 Thursday.

The decline was due chiefly to a cut in the price of steel scrap at Pittsburgh. The new nominal price of $20.50-$21 for No. 1 heavy melting scrap was posted to conform with the wishes of defense officials.

Clearings Set January Top In Washington

Setting a new all-time high for the month, Washington bank clearings in January totaled $132,187,282, the Clearing House Association reported yesterday. This was $25,050,179 or 23 per cent more than the $107,137,093 recorded in January, 1940. The best January heretofore was in 1929, when clearings aggregated $129,438,291.

The January total was $7,656,272 less than in December when an all-time high of $139,843,554 was registered.

Riggs' Income Gains

Pamphlet report of the Riggs National Bank yesterday revealed that current operating net income in 1940 totaled $1,022,877, against $962,963 in the previous year. The bank made $14,882 new loans and discounts during the year for an aggregate of $28,977,000. The upward demand for business and construction loans accelerated at the outset of the past summer and still continues, President Robert V. Fleming reported.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP).—The wheat market was steady in tone, but a dull, listless affair otherwise, today. Trading, aside from a brief flurry at the start, dragged wearily along without much life to it. Prices advanced as much as half-cent at the opening on buying induced by belief the declines prevailing for the last seven consecutive market days had run their course. However, the market sagged soon and most of the day found little change.

A flurry of selling at the close depressed prices for the eighth consecutive day to below the previous close. Declines were small and the range was unchanged to ½-cent down. May 82⅝@82¼, July 76⅜@76¼; corn ¼ to ⅜ down, May 61¼@61¾, July 61½; oats unchanged to ⅛ higher.

Improvement in flour trade was reported from Minneapolis. Army headquarters in Chicago was reported seeking bids on 104,862 barrels of flour for delivery over the next three months. Exporters circles said Pacific Coast mills had sold between 25,000 and 30,000 barrels of lower-grade United States flour for shipment to Hongkong, China, this last week, with further business hampered by inability to obtain freight space.

Discouraging to wheat traders was a report that so far in half a season the United States had exported only 19,886,000 bushels of wheat and flour, with prospects for the entire season estimated at 29,000,000 bushels.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Advances of 4 to 8 points in cotton futures today mirrored heavy demand for cotton textiles, especially from the industrial trade.

Turnover in print cloths and related items in Worth Street was estimated at above 10,000,000 yards. Goods sold for delivery through July and popular numbers brought a ⅛ cent a yard premium for nearby delivery.

Exports Thursday, 7,245 bales; season so far, 671,807. Port receipts, 20,236; port stocks, 3,470,951.

Cottonseed Oil

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Cottonseed oil futures recovered early losses today and closed 4 to 7 points higher. The rally accompanied optimistic estimates of January consumption and a modest advance in lard.

Forecasts on January consumption ranged from more than 300,000 barrels to 350,000. Use in December totaled 276,102 barrels.

Sales totaled 67 contracts; May 6.49 bid, July 6.60, September, 6.65 bid.

Crude oil was priced at 5¼ cents a pound bid in the Southeast and Valley and 5⅛ in Texas.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Demand for cotton goods today embraced practically every type of material. Between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 yards of print cloths were sold, with a tightening delivery situation holding sales in check. Mills asked 5¾ cents a yard for 64x60, or ⅛ of a cent increase.

Demand for woolen piece goods was brisk, especially fabrics for summer suitings. Substantial sales were reported for standard types of rayon goods and business in finished goods was encouraging.

Sales were reported on the basis of the following quotations for immediate delivery: Print cloths, 38½, 60x60s, 5.35. 5¾, Broadcloths, 37, 100x60, 4.10, 7¾. Sheetings, 37, 48x48, 4.00, 6¾. Combed lawns, 40, 76x72, 9.00, 7¼@7¼.

Snow Helps Spur Retail Demand For Heavy Apparel

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Snow in many parts of the East and Middle West this week brought increased demand for heavy apparel, and sales at retail stores averaged 8 to 12 per cent above last year for the country as a whole, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Wholesalers also enjoyed a brisk run of business as retailers began placing substantial orders for spring goods.

"Although storms cut somewhat into store traffic, snow and lower temperatures gave an added fillip to retailers' clearances of winter merchandise," the credit agency said. "Buying of winter sportswear, men's overcoats, women's furs and furred coats perked up noticeably."

Drug stores reported sales heavy, grocery volume remained close to 10 per cent above last year, and automobile sales were still running more than 20 per cent higher.

"Retailers continued to buy heavily for spring," said the agency, commenting on wholesale trends. "Covering was for as much as 90 days ahead, with quantities larger than a year ago. Immediate or early delivery, however, was still being emphasized on many types of orders."

Stock List Drifts Irregularly Higher; War Fears and Tax Clouds Persist

New York, Jan. 31—A little short covering and some investment buying helped the stock market to regain its balance today although a strong rallying urge was lacking.

Fractional recoveries were tacked on a few steels, motors, rails, oils, coppers and aircrafts. Minus signs, however, were plentiful at the finish. Dealings were relatively slow.

The list got off to a fairly good start but stumbled occasionally and final prices, for the most part, were well under the day's best which were posted in the forenoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was up .1 of a point at 42.1, but still was near the low marks of last August where it dropped in the preceding session. On the month the composite showed a net loss of 1.8 points. Transfers totaled 465,470 shares compared with 775,770 Thursday, which was the largest volume since December 31.

Steel company earnings statements, higher automobile output, expanding retail spending and reallization the market had been in a downward drift since January 10, brokers said, served to bring in some support. Nervousness over the Hitler speech seemed to have waned but war fears still were present as a market handicap and tax clouds persisted.

A gloomy indicator was seen in the sale of a stock exchange seat for $27,000, a new low since 1898 and $3,000 under the 41-year bottom quotations established in the past several weeks. Notice also was taken of the institution of governmental priorities for machine tool makers beginning February 28 and a drop of $1 a ton in the price of steel scrap at Pittsburgh.

U. S. Steel was unchanged but Bethlehem and Republic clung to fractional advances. Ahead were Chrysler, General Motors, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, Kennecott, American Smelting, Consolidated Edison, Standard Oil of N. J., and Texas Corporation.

The restricted nature of the day's proceedings was shown by the fact only 746 individual stocks were traded against 861 the day before.

J. C. Penny lost 2 points and lesser recessions were recorded for American Can, duPont, Union Carbide, International Harvester, Goodyear and American Telephone.

Bonds were irregularly lower. In the Curb, modest improvement was held by American Gas, Brewster Aero, Phoenix Securities and Glen Alden Coal. Todd Shipyards got back 4½ points of its 6-point slide of yesterday. Losers included Aluminum of America, Gulf Oil, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Electric Bond & Share. Turnover here was about 86,000 shares versus 163,000 the day before.

January stock sales in the New York Stock Exchange dropped to the lowest since last September but bond turnover increased to the largest since start of the war.

Stock turnover totaled 13,294,670 shares, compared with 18,397,158 in December and 15,990,665 a year ago. Last September turnover was 11,940,210.

Bond sales of $230,814,525, face value, were the best since $480,789,000 changed hands in September, 1939. This compared with $211,237,000 in December and $144,917,000 a year earlier.

Equitable Life Assets Increase

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States had total assets at the end of 1940 of $2,564,000,000, a gain of $162,000,000 over a year ago, Thomas I. Parkinson, president, said today.

The society, Parkinson reported, bought $250,000,000 of high-grade railroad bonds in 1940 and carried $230,000,000 of the bonds on its book at year end. Market value was approximately $5,000,000 above cost.

Holdings of Government securities totaled $220,000,000, of which $134,500,000 will mature within six months. Total Government and other securities amounted to $1,524,000,000.

Republic Steel 'Geared for Profits' At Lower Output

Cleveland, Jan. 31 (AP).—Representatives of investment banking and insurance companies heard today that Republic Steel was now running at 98½ per cent of capacity but was geared for efficient and profitable operation at 65 per cent in less demanding times.

The banking representatives were touring Republic's Ohio plants as a preliminary to the company's $100,000,000 refinancing.

"This company came up the hard way," Charles M. White, vice president in charge of operations, told them. "Almost anybody can make a profit these days. We aim to do it in days when we have to get out and hunt for orders."

Myron A. Wick, Republic vice president in charge of finance, said the company's 1940 last quarter showed that it was capable of earning $4.25 a common share annually, even with expected new 1941 taxes.

Security Offerings Decline in Week

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities declined somewhat during the week ended yesterday totaling $62,358,973 compared with $73,794,500 the previous week, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today. In the same week a year ago new issues totaled $17,361,563.

Only 2 per cent of the week's offerings represented new money and that was raised by municipalities. Corporate financing was confined to refunding.

Capital Store Sales Up 25% In Latest Week

Washington department stores sales in the week ended January 25 advanced 25 per cent over the like 1940 week, according to the weekly report of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

For the four weeks ended January 25, local sales were 19 per cent heavier than in the same 1940 period.

The entire Fifth Federal Reserve District likewise showed a sharp increase, sales in the week ended January 25 being 24 per cent greater than in the corresponding period of 1940. For the four-week period, retail sales were 16 per cent heavier in the district.

The Nation as a whole showed a 12 per cent increase in department store sales in the week ended January 25, according to the Federal Reserve Board at Washington. In the four weeks ended on the same date they averaged 10 per cent above last year.

By Federal Reserve districts, increases for the week ended January 25 over a year ago were:

Boston, 7; New York, 9; Philadelphia, 21; Cleveland, 12; Atlanta, 31; Chicago, 12; St. Louis, 13; Kansas City, 11; Dallas, 20, and San Francisco, 5 per cent.

No figure was given for the Minneapolis area.

Meanwhile the Richmond bank reported that 1940 was one of the best years in the history of the Fifth Reserve District in trade and industry "and was moderately good in agriculture."

"Construction work . . . stimulated in the second half-year by much defense work," the report stated, "set an all-time record of $520,417,000 in contracts actually awarded, an increase of 15 per cent over the previous high of $451,030,000 for 1928, and 38 per cent above the 1939 total. City building permits issued in 1940 were also near a record level, totaling $127,398,101 in 31 Fifth District cities."

The cotton textile industry consumed more cotton than in any previous year and rayon yard mills "again set a record for shipments to domestic consumers in 1940, and the demand was so great that reserve stocks of yarn declined to a four days supply at the end of the year."

Sales of new passenger automobiles rose 27 per cent over 1939 sales. Retail trade as indicated by department store sales rose 11 per cent from the 1939 level and furniture stores also reported an 11 per cent gain.

Rites Monday For I. O. Ball, D. C. Hotelman

Funeral services for Irving O. Ball, 76, who died yesterday at his home in the Wyoming Apartments, will be held Monday at 2 p. m. at Foundry Methodist Church. Mr. Ball had been ill of a heart ailment several months.

For many years proprietor of the old Hamilton Hotel and active in business here 50 years, Mr. Ball retired from management of the Hamilton in 1921, after sale of the property to the corporation which built the present structure. He had risen to ownership of the hotel where he had been a clerk, after coming to Washington in 1890 as a clerk in the Pension Office.

Born on Block Island, R. I., January 28, 1865, Mr. Ball was graduated from Greenrich (R. I.) Academy and from the Rhode Island State College of Agriculture. In 1889 he was married to Miss Carre Briant, of Morristown, N. J., who died here in 1938. In 1934, he married Mrs. Anna Hayes Champlin, of Providence, R. I., widow of Christopher E. Champlin, of Providence.

During his residence in Washington, Mr. Ball was an active member of Foundry Methodist Church. He was a member of the Hotelmen's Association and of St. John's Lodge of Masons.

Besides his wife, he is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Frederick A. Uliedt, of Washington; two brothers, Fenner Ball, of Block Island, and Everett Ball, of Manchester, Pa., and three grandchildren.

Honorary pallbearers will include William L. Clarke, Harry L. Underwood, Rear Admiral H. G. Gillmor, Harry Hoskinson, George H. Ward, Henry W. Fisher, C. F. Jacobsen, Thomas H. Reynolds, Harry O. Hine, Willis F. Roe, Lewis E. Breunniger, Samuel W. McIntosh, Robert B. Tracy, J. Howard Brine, Dr. George B. Woods and Ashmun Brown.

Nelson Johnson Will Leave China, Roosevelt Hints

President Roosevelt intimated at his press conference yesterday that Nelson T. Johnson, American Ambassador to China, will be appointed to another post in the near future. The President said he could make no announcement until he receives an agreement from the State Department, indicating that approval of Johnson's appointment to some other post has already been sought from a foreign government.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull earlier had refused to either confirm or deny a report current in Administration quarters that Ambassador Johnson and Clarence E. Gauss, American Minister to Australia, might exchange posts.

According to the report Johnson, who has served as envoy in China for over 11 years, first as minister and the last six years as ambassador, would go from Chungking to Canberra, and Gauss who saw extended service in consular and embassy posts in China before his appointment as Minister to Australia a year ago, would become Minister to China.

D. C. Salesman Found Guilty In Attack Case

After deliberating for five hours a Montgomery County (Md.) jury last night found Floyd Jones, 31-year-old automobile salesman, of 3400 Dent Place Northwest, guilty of a charge of criminal assault upon a 25-year-old 5-and-10-cent store clerk. The jury reported at 11:15 p. m.

The young woman testified that Jones attacked her in the front seat of his automobile near Glen Echo, Md., while her friend, John Bjornson, of Arlington, Va., looked on from the back seat.

Dr. C. E. Hawks, of Rockville, testified that the girl had been maltreated. The defense counsel, Louis B. Arnold and F. Bernard Welsh, claimed the criminal attack was impossible. State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson pointed out that she had rebuffed Bjornson and hardly would yield to a stranger.

Coolidge Topic Of 'Heroes' Drama

Vignettes from the life of Calvin Coolidge will be dramatized by Calvin Coolidge High School students in the Heroes of Democracy series broadcast over WJSV at 2:30 p. m. today.

His action in the famous Boston police strike and his dramatic taking of office upon the death of President Harding will be emphasized in the program.

The series is sponsored by The Post and WJSV. Students participating today will be Donald Buckley, James Kavanagh, John Mellwee, Robert Kaider, Robert Anderson, Donald Goldstein, Lillian Venezky, Anne Henning, Tearle Wofford, Dorothy Belt, Bernard Shankman, Robert Hamilton and Warren Allinger.

Admiral West, 83, Dies at Hospital

Rear Admiral Horace Breneman West, 83, U. S. C. G., retired, died yesterday at Naval Hospital.

A native of Lancaster, Pa., Admiral West joined the Coast Guard, then known as the Revenue Cutter Service, in 1880. He rose through the grades to the rank of commander which he held at the time of his retirement in 1922. Subsequently he was promoted to the retired rank of commodore and raised by act of Congress to a rear admiralcy in 1937.

D. C. Red Cross Ships Supplies for Democracies

District Red Cross volunteers yesterday forwarded a second shipment of garments and surgical dressings for England and Greece to the New Jersey shipping center. Included were 1,838 knitted and sewn garments and 16,870 surgical dressings.

The chapter also announced arrangements have been completed for sending 476 food packages to prisoners of war. The packages will be delivered through the International Red Cross in Geneva.

Contract Bridge

Perhaps you can't blame West, the victim of today's sad story too much. It certainly seems the height of presumption for opposing players to reach a contract of four against his "rock-crusher" holding with its beautiful heart suit, studded with honors as a diadem is with jewels.

The bidding:

Opening lead: K ♠.

It happened in a rubber-bridge game at the Eighth Street Bridge Club in Greenwich Village, and perhaps it would be well to let West keep his annonymity, but North was Charles P.Everitt, one of the world's greatest authorities on old books, and his partner was Jack Miller, a young business executive.

Miller overtook the spade king with the ace. He felt sure that West could not hold more than one spade, and he believed that the tricks to be won defensively had better be taken quickly.

He laid down the diamond ace; and when Everett played a club, followed with the duce. As they used the suit-directing signals, this was an indication that his re-entry was in the club suit. The diamond suit ruffed, and a club returned. This process continued untill North had used his three trumps to ruff West's diamond honors, and South had used two lowly trumps to fell the ace and king of clubs. After that they had to call a halt, but when the excitement was past and the tricks counted, they found they had down five tricks. Of course, he had the small consolation of being able to deduct the 100 points for four honors in one hand.

The bidding of the hand by North and South was perhaps bold, but they could have made their contract had West permitted the last bid of four spades to stand. Even playing the cards open, the best that East and West can do is to win three tricks, showing emphatically the tremendous part distribution plays in the outcome of a hand.

How the Nation's lawmakers stack up in the realm of general knowledge outside of politics is going to be shown in the new question and answer radio program, "No Politics," which makes its debut over WJSV and the Columba network today.

To be heard every Saturday from 1:30 to 2 p. m., EST, the program will have a different group of four Congressmen as guests each weekend and they will be plied with questions of fact and fancy on current events, history, literature, geography, people in the news, quotations, lines from famous documents—in fact on any and every subject as long as it involves "No Politics."

The legislator guests on the debut program Saturday are Clarence J. Brown, Republican, of Ohio; Robert Ramspeck, Democrat, of Georgia; August H. Andresen, Republican, of Minnesota, and John M. Coffee, Democrat, of Washington.

Ernest K. Lindley, the well-known Washington columnist who is also correspondent for "Newsweek," is to serve as master of ceremonies and interlocutor on the initial program.

The broadcasts will originate in the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel in downtown Washington where the visual audience will number approximately 300 persons.

"No Politics" will follow in semi-formal fashion the procedures of a regular Congressional session."

The Post Radio Time Table

1:30 P. M., WJSV—Here's a new notion: "No Politics." With members of Congress following parliamentary rules, questions from all parts of the country on national and international affairs will be discussed in a "non-partisan" sense. Don't take the title too literally. The Representatives aren't expected to.

3, WJSV—Students of Calvin Coolidge High School dramatize events in the life of their school's namesake for the Heroes of Democracy series.

3:30, WOL—Defense in Action offers on-the-spot description of the building of light combat tanks for the War Department.

6, WJSV—Attorney General Jackson's plans to improve procedure of the quasi-judicial Federal agencies are viewed in "Report to the Nation."

8, WINX—ASCAP on Parade offers a second program to make you whistle for the good old days.

Text of Minority Report on Lend-Lease Measure

Credits Will Serve Aid-Britain Cause Better, It Asserts

Following is the text of the minority report of the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the lease-lend bill:

We are for all aid to Britain short of war and short of sacrificing our own defense and our own freedom. The British, in their valiant struggle which has aroused our deepest sympathy, need planes, guns and war material.

We are for this objective without delay. We believe this objective can be accomplished without granting enormous power to the President, which the founders of the Republic wisely decreed should remain with Congress as the representatives of the people. If there is any delay in reaching this objective it would be caused by this unprecedented bid for Presidential power.

We would willingly support a straightforward bill which would grant Britain $2,000,000,000 worth of credit.

This would eliminate the step of giving the President absolute power over every concern in this country manufacturing war materials. This would not permit him to be the director of the war in England; a position which is fraught with greater danger to the American people. If we assume the direction of the war, we underwrite the success of the war. The ultimate result must be the American people will pay the full costs of the war and that means we will be obligated to put our material resources and our men into the struggle.

Granting credits which England needs will fully meet the situation of today and it will lessen materially the likelihood of our going into the war. Our naval and military experts agree that our Nation is in no danger of attack; that with our vast resources and geographical position our situation is not comparable to that of nations of continental Europe.

This power requested is too much to give any man at a time when the country is at peace. As Secretary Cordell Hull once said: "This is too much power for a bad man to have, or for a good man to want."

What Is Needed

We have been given two reasons for new laws: 1—Britain is running short, not of money, not of assets, but of dollar exchange. 2—We need to coordinate British procurement with our own defense efforts.

What This Bill Does Not Do

This bill does not provide dollar exchange for Britain, and is not needed to procure coordination of our defense efforts.

This bill will not provide any additional war supplies for aid to Britain within the 60 or 90 days of her alleged crisis, unless the President uses the power provided to dispose of part of our arms or our Navy, which he and his Cabinet officers have specifically denied they could spare.

There has been much talk of "restrictive" committee amendments. The amendments adopted do not prohibit our convoying merchantmen, do not require our Army or Navy officers to determine our own defense needs, do not place a Constitutional two-year limitation on the life of the bill.

What This Bill Does

Using the slogan of "Aid to Britain," and under the title of "Promoting Defense," this bill gives the President unlimited, unprecedented and unpredictable powers—literally to seize anything in this country and to give it to any other country, without limit in law. He may sell or give away our Navy, our planes, our arms, our secrets and use any proceeds from such sales for similar purposes; he need come to Congress only for appropriations to restore our Navy, our planes, our arms.

John Bassett Moore, world famous authority on international and constitutional law, says: "The pending bill assumes to transfer the war-making power from the Congress, where the Constitution lodges it, to the Executive . . . The tide of totalitarianism in government . . . has not only reached our shores, but has gone far to destroy constitutional barriers, which, once broken down, are not likely to be restored." Remember, we cannot repeal war, we cannot repeal bankruptcy, and we cannot repeal dictatorship; under this bill we surrender our democratic way of life now, for fear of a fture threat to our democratic way of life. The oldest and last constitutional democracy surrenders its freedom under the pretext of voiding war, with the probable result that the newest dictatorship will soon go to war.

Our Proposal

We have offered in committee, and will offer again on the floor, the following constructive, democratic program to aid Britain and to keep us out of war:

1. A $2,000,000,000 credit to Britain, to be used in this country for purchasing arms when her dollar balance for this purpose is exhausted, requiring reasonable collateral security if available.
2. Permit the sale by our Government of arms to Britain only when our highest Army and Navy officers certify in writing such arms are not necesssary for our national defense.
3. A one-year time limit on all extraordinary powers. Congress meets again next year and can easily extend the time limit if our interests require it.
4. Provide that no vessels of the United States Navy shall be disposed of without the consent of Congress.
5. Prohibit the use of our ports for repair bases for belligerent ships. We must not bring the war to American ports.
6. Prohibit the use of American vessels to transfer exports to belligerents.
7. Prohibit the convoying of merchantmen by our Navy. One sunken ship might plunge us into war.

Our program would permit the cooperation of all foreign purchases through the Office of Production Management, instead of making the President the director-general of the war in Europe. Our Government now has power to fix priorities and forbid exports, so no additional powers are needed to enforce coordination. At our hearings, Mr. Knudsen was asked: "You have sufficient power now to coordinate the procurement of materials?" Mr. Knudsen answered: "Yes." If instead of coordination we demand domination, if we assume what Secretary Stimson called "the general strategy" of the war, we assume the responsibility for its outcome, and that leads to sending an expeditionary force overseas.

Congress should specify the nations to receive aid. To leave it wide open would mean the President could, now that we have lifted the moral embargo, give aid to Russia, by sending planes and war materials. Congress is to be in session for some months. It can extend aid to other countries if it is necessary.

Conclusion

This is the most important and far-reaching bill this house has ever considered. It involves a complete change in the way of life of our Republic, both internal and in our foreign relations. We should face this legislation calmly and courageously as intelligent patriots, without panic or partisanship. We do not solve these problems merely by passing them all on to one man. Control of the purse and control of the war-making power belongs to Congress. The safety and security of the American people demand they remain with Congress.
